HUNT 3 WOMEN FEARED LOST IN ICE CAVES

Posses Search Strange Area In New Mexico Desert Tourists Visited.

AUTO, LUGGAGE FOUND

Governor Directs Search In Frozen Caverns; Relatives Fear For Safety.

(By Associated Press)

GRANTS, N. M. — Posses of state police and sheriff's deputies began at dawn today a search for three Kentucky women tourists, missing since Tuesday near the strange Perpetual Ice Caves of the Western New Mexico desert.

Their automobile first was noticed parked near the caves in the heart of the Indian country Tuesday. When it was seen in the same place again yesterday, an alarm was spread. The women were identified as:

Miss Irene Piedule, 45, of Winchester, Ky., Clark county home demonstration agent for the last five years; her sister, Miss Laura Piedalue, 47, a New York nurse; and Miss Marie Antoinette De Laforest of Lexington, an instructor of French at the University of Kentucky.

Headed For Montana.

The three had been expected to arrive shortly at Billings and Lewistown, Mont., to visit sisters of the Misses Piedalue. Concern for their safety was expressed there by relatives, who had received a postcard from them, mailed at Albuquerque Tuesday.

Gov. Clyde Tingley came here early today personally to head the search. Officers equipped themselves with heavy ropes, by which to probe deep crevices in the frozen caverns and in the jagged surrounding lava country.

The women's locked automobile was found on a rough dirt road near the caves, indicating they probably had left it to explore the region on foot. Inside were several bags, part of a lunch, their hats, money and cigarets.

One officer said it was possible the women might have become lost in the jagged "malpais" region—a land of lava formations of which the caves are a part.

Perpetual Refrigerator.

The ice caves—little visited because of their inaccessibility—resemble a natural refrigerator in the manner in which ice formed during the winter months is preserved by peculiar cooling process of winds coming through the crevices of the lava flow.

In Kentucky, officers and friends said Irene Piedalue and Miss De Faforrest left about the middle of July, expecting to meet Laura Piedalue at St. Louis. They intended to visit the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone park, returning by way of Montana to visit relatives of the Piedalues.

Rusty Flag Sign, Atop Courthouse, Goes To Junk Yard

The huge metal flag, which has faced Central park from the top of the courthouse for more than 20 years, was torn town today and sent to the junk heap.

Erected during the World war, the flag had been damaged by rust, and commissioners ordered it removed to prevent the possibility of it falling on pedestrians in front of the courthouse.

For four years after it was erected, the flag, which measured about 12 by 20 feet, was illuminated by more than 200 electric lights. State examiners instructed commissioners to turn off the lights as an economy move.

Workmen employed by the county commissioners removed it in sections while blockades were set up in front of the courthouse to keep pedestrians from walking where they might be injured by falling debris.

3 O.S.R. Trusties Wreck Guard's Car In Escaping

Trio Flees While Working on Lawn of Institution; Damaged Machine Found In Ditch at Savannah.

Three trusties who escaped from the Mansfield reformatory in a guard's automobile and wrecked the machine at Savannah, seven miles north of Ashland yesterday, were being hunted today by police officers throughout Ohio.

Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke said the inmates assigned to the greenhouse, were working on the institution lawn, and took an automobile owned by E. T. Hicks, a reformatory guard, which was parked adjacent to the administration building, outside the walls. They fled north on route 545.

Turns Over on Curve.

Posses of guards responding to the escape alarm found the wrecked car in a ditch at Savannah. They searched the vicinity unsuccessfully until after dark without finding any trace of the fugitives. Glattke said this led him to believe that they were apparently uninjured when the machine rolled over as they sped around a curve.

One of the inmates who had been confined to the institution for nearly four years was to come before the parole board for hearing in September, the superintendent said.

The fugitives are Elmer Fitzgerald, 20, sentenced March 5, 1937, from Montgomery county to serve from one to 20 years for auto theft; Russell Mason, 20, received Aug. 30, 1937, from Muskingum county to serve from one to 15 years for burglary and larceny, and William Jackson, 19, from Hamilton county, who was serving a one to 20-year term for auto theft. He was received at the institution Sept. 13, 1934, and was to have had a hearing by the parole board in two months.

HIKES RECEIPTS

Taxpaying Spurt Increases Collection To $120,000.

A spurt in real estate tax collections during the past three days had boosted receipts for the last half period to $120,710 today, but collections were still below figures for the same period last year.

Property owners paid $13,720 into the county treasury Friday for the best day since the tax books opened July 5. The previous high was $11,900 on Wednesday.

Receipts for the three-day period ending last night totaled $32,420 and brightened the prospects for a better than average collection, County Treasurer John E. Kolb said.

Nearly $890,000, including approximately $150,000 in delinquent taxes, is on the current tax bill.

14 FEARED DEAD IN TEXAS FLOOD

Barn Used as Refuge Swept Away By Torrents.

SAN SABA, Tex.—(U.P.)—Fourteen persons, who sought refuge from flood waters on top of a barn, were believed to have been drowned today, in the raging Saba river. They had been marooned on the structure about 24 hours.

River workers said that due to the sweeping rise of the flood waters, the barn was almost certain to have been swept away.

A rescue party which set out in boats was forced back to shore when the torrents of water proved too strong for the small craft.

Apple, Peach Crops Hard Hit By Frost, Only Half Normal

Heavily damaged by frost late last spring, Richland county's peach and apple orchards will produce less than half the normal crop this season, orchardists and County Agent George B. Ganyard predicted today.

Apples were hardest hit by the cold during their early development stage, and in some of the county orchards the yield is expected to drop to 20 per cent of normal.

Despite the sharp cut in production, prices for apples are about the same as last year, while peaches will sell for slightly more, growers said.

The only bright spot in the county's fruit forecast is the blackberry crop which is expected to be one of the best in recent years.

Richland county is typical of the rest of the state in the extent of its fruit damage, since the statewide yield of apples is set at about one-third normal and the estimated peach production at approximately half the average yield.

Ohio orchards are expected to produce 4,030,000 bushels of apples, and the peach crop is forecast at 531,000 bushels as compared with 1,296,000 bushels in 1937.

Esley Cleckner, Wooster road, one of the leading peach growers in the county, said he anticipated a crop of 2,500 to 3,000 bushels, slightly under last year. He estimated he lost 1,500 bushels as a result of the spring freezes.

Roy B. Dickson, who has 250 acres of peach and apple trees near Bellville, estimated his apple crop at 20 per cent and peach crop at 50 per cent of normal. Early Transparent apples, which are being harvested this month, are about the only variety to show a heavy yield, Dickson said.

COUNCIL TURNS DOWN PLEA OF NIGHT CLUBS

Accepts Committee's Report Recommending Rejection Of Plea For Longer Hours.

PREVIOUS REPORT CITED

Action Taken Without Comment; Sunday Ban On 3.2 Beer 'Held In Abeyance.'

For the second time in four months city council turned "thumbs down" last night on a request of the Richland County Permit Holders' association that the night club "curfew" ordinance be amended to permit the extension of closing hours.

Council took the action by accepting the report of its special committee, headed by Councilman Russell Porch, who told the city fathers that the group recommended that "no action" be taken on the request.

Says First Report Final.

"We have met and given the fullest consideration to the petition requesting an extension of closing hours," Porch said. "We made our report four months ago, which was final and therefore we recommend that no action be taken."

The report was ordered received and filed without comment from any of the eight members present. Fifth Ward Councilman Fred Miller and Council President Karl P. Troll were absent. George Berg, president, pro-tem, presided.

Commenting on the proposal of a Sunday ban on the sale of 3.2 beer, Porch said the question would be "held in abeyance" until City Solicitor Marion D. Ward had an opportunity to check recent court decisions.

Proposed Sunday Ban on 3.2.

Ward had informed the committee which includes Porch, Lester D. Hunter and James E. Crum, that the Sunday ban on 3.2 beer sought by the liquor dealers, would not be legal because 3.2 beer was defined as non-intoxicating.

The permit holders had asked council that they be permitted to stay open until 1:30 a. m. six nights a week. They now close at 1 a. m. on week days and midnight on Saturdays. The petition followed a proposal of liquor dealers to close places selling 3.2 beer on Sunday if the request for extension of hours was granted.

Bids on the construction of a new No. 2 fire station to be built at a cost not to exceed $7,950 was authorized by city council at a special meeting last night.

The new building will be of the latest modern design finished in red brick. It will be 42 feet wide and 50 feet deep and will have accommadations for one pumper, dormitory for six men and will include an office.

Styert said that he hoped to have the construction work started by Sept. 1 so the job could be completed by December. While the building is under construction equipment will be moved to the Central station.

U. S. RULING ON 'SIT-DOWNS' TO GET NEW TEST

Decision Upholding Firing Of Workers Seizing Plant, Heads For High Court.

NLRB PLANNING APPEAL

Fights Order Setting Aside Decree Directing Re-Hiring Of 92 Steel Men.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—A federal court ruling that an employer may discharge workers who seize property in sitdown strikes appeared headed today for a supreme court review.

The decision was rendered last night by the United States circuit court of appeals.

It set aside a national labor relations board order finding the Fansteel Metallurgical corporation guilty of unfair labor practices and directing the reinstatement of 92 men discharged Feb. 17, 1937 when they occupied the company's North Chicago plant.

Fahy Hits Decision.

Belief was expressed in informed Washington quarters that the board would appeal. Charles Fahy, general counsel for the NLRB, commented "the reasoning of the board was correct; that of the majority of the court was incorrect."

Leonard C. Bajork, regional director of theh board, also took issue with the court's findings. Van A. Bittner, regional director of the steel workers organizing committee, said he expected the government "will amply take care of the situation."

The workers' status at the time they occupied the plant as strikers was the principal issue.

The court majority, Judges Will M. Sparks and Walter C. Lindley, held the workers lost their status as employes when the company discharged them and hence "there was no longer a majority of petitioners' employes who were members" of the union which sought collective bargaining rights."

Point To "Injustice."

The court said it was compelled to take this view "tot avoid placing our approval upon such activities as they engaged in. To do otherwise would be an injustice not only to the employer, but to the unions and their friends who wish them well."

The strike was the outgrowth of a controversy over collective bargaining between the plant management and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers union, a CIO affiliate Sitdowners held the plant for 10 days before a tear gas attack drove them out.

WHITE SPEAKS AT MILLERSBURG

Ex Governor Campaigns On Record at Capital.

MILLERSBURG, O.—(INS)—Former Governor George White left Millersburg today with a statement that he believed his record was better indication of his liberalism than "a blindfolded following a must orders from any leader of my party."

Speaking before a group of party adherents, White, who is opposing Sen. Robert J. Bulkley for renomination, declared:

Much has been said about conservation and liberalism. What is a liberal? A Democratic senator defined a public servant as liberal in proportion to how liberal he is with the taxpayers' money.

"By that test, my record as governor would qualify me as a conservative because I cut the administrative cost of government many millions of dollars."

DUBLIN—(U.P.)—Douglas Corrigan, America's champion wrong-direction transatlantic aviator, slept late today and then after a light breakfast, announced he had recovered fully from the effects of a week of strain.

It was not the flight that tired Corrigan, or the writing of dozens of post cards, or the entertainment programs. He said that he felt the strain of being a hero first—when 200 girls mobbed him yesterday as he came out of a tailor shop and tried to kiss him; and second when his $900 airplane was loaded onto the steamship Lehigh Thursday to precede him to New York. A wing of the plane was severely jarred but proved to be undamaged.

GIRDLER TO GO BEFORE PROBERS

Republic Chairman To Answer Murray Who Hurled 'Filth' Charge At Company.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Republic Steel Corporation officials said today that board Chairman Tom Girdler, would testify at the senate civil liberties committee's hearings on last year's "Little Steel" strike.

Girdler, bitter foe of Committee for Industrial Organization Chairman John L. Lewis and organized labor, probably will be called the week after next to answer the statement made by a union leader before the committee.

Committee employes said that he had been under subpoena for some time. Chairman Robert M. La Follette, jr., Progs., Wis., said that "no plans have been made" for Girdler's appearance, but T. F. Patton, general counsel for Republic, said:

"You're damned right he will be here—after that statement of Murray's."

He referred to testimony of Philip Murray, chairman of the CIO's steel workers' organization committee, in which he described the Republic Steel Corporation as "the filthiest industrial cesspool of labor relations in Ameria" and charged that its tactics in resisting the steel organization drive were more "reprehensible" than those of any other organization.

Girdler's reply to Murray will (Continued on Page 12, Col. 6)

CHARGE RIFLES SEIZED

Reds Claim Manchu Soldiers Attacked Cutter And That They Returned Fire.

(By International News Service)

TOKYO — Another "Soviet invasion of Manchukuo" brought Russo-Japanese relations nearer the straining point today when Tokyo came out with its semi-official version of a clash on the Siberian frontier.

Sixty Soviet soldiers, said a dispatch from Hsinking, Manchukuo, fired on ten Manchu civilians from three patrol boats on the Ussuri river Thursday.

'Victims' Still Missing.

The alleged attack occurred nine miles above Tungmanchen "definitely within Manchukuo" territory. The "civilians" have been missing since.

(The Soviet account of the same engagement said two Manchu motor boats "violated the Soviet frontier," and six soldiers landed on the Soviet island of Faingov.)

(Then the Manchu soldiers allegedly opened fire on a passing Soviet river cutter, which returned the fire. Two Manchus were wounded and four others were detained by Soviet frontier guards, who also seized a sub-machine gun, five rifles, and 1,000 cartridges.)

The incident took place downriver from the area close to the Korean border where the Soviets have been fortifying a hill position.

The Ussuri and Amur river boundaries between Siberia and Manchukuo have long been sources of disputes between Tokyo and Moscow. The rivers sometimes change their beds, creating and eradicating islands, and leading to (Continued on Page 12, Col. 7)

Borrowing Rules Given By Expert

By JOAN DURHAM
(AP Feature Service Writer)

There are two good rules to follow when you borrow!

Never borrow anything you can't replace if it should be lost or damaged; set a time when you will return the borrowed item—and return it then.

There are, of course, legitimate times to borrow.

Occasionally you will need an item you may never have to use again. If you have a friend from whom to borrow it and you are able to reciprocate, there probably will be no reason to hesitate.

Ticklish Business.

Borrowing money, however, is a ticklish business.

If you need large sums, borrow from an organization that makes a business of lending.

There may be times—when you're seriously ill, changing jobs or far from home—when a small amount loan from a friend will tide you over. Be sure to set a date for repaying and note it down. Keep your credit clear by keeping that date.

Book borrowers are a special plague. Many persons object strenuously to lending books. If you know that's the case, don't, under any circumstances, ask to borrow one.

Watch Those Books.

Few people, on the other hand, want or can afford to own everything they read. That's why public and lending libraries were formed. That's a reason, too, for the custom of exchanging books among friends. But don't abuse it.

Be meticulous about returning recently-published books. Don't keep one more than two weeks without permission. Probably several other people would like to read it while it's a topic for discussion.

Never put a borrowed book into your own bookcase. Someone in the family may think it belongs to you and lend it elsewhere.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

KATIE EYED me dubiously for an instant, and I knew that she wished further to protest my staying in the kitchen and beginning preparations for a midnight supper. But I had no time to waste upon her vagaries, although upon a less important occasion, and because of her long and faithful service to our family, I might have indulged in her dislike of having anyone "fooling around" in her kitchen.

The impending arrival of our guests, however, together with the mystery and sense of menace entailed by my father's code message concerning their reception, made it necessary for me to exact obedience from her instantly, and I faced her with my sternest look, the one which Dicky terms, my "tiger-taming stare."

But Jim saved me the necessity of supplementing my look with words of reproof.

"Katie!" he demanded sternly. "Are you deaf? Didn't you hear Mrs. Graham tell us to hurry? Now you stir your stumps and come along with me."

Katie Obeys Jim.

Katie tossed her head belligerently.

"Me, I got seex, seven times betters ears dan your big vuns," she retorted, but even as she muttered the words, she moved with alacrity toward the door, and I knew that I should have no more trouble with her

With the door safely closed behind them, and knowing that with Katherine on guard upstairs there was no chance of anyone save Dicky entering the kitchen, I slumped into the nearest chair, and for several minutes gave myself over to the process known as "pulling one's self together."

I was thoroughly bewildered by this unexpected code message from my father, from whom I had not expected to hear for weeks to come. I knew that the quest of Queen Olga's emeralds, his ostensible mission and the more important secret reason which lay beneath that search, ordinarily would have kept him incommunicado from us for a much longer time than had elapsed since his secret departure from the farm.

Where was he? My timorous heart, filled with fear for him, sent the question out into space, but no answer came except a thought so swift and sudden that it might have been a direct message from him.

"You're not lifting your end of the load," the mental message came, and with a flush of shame at my weakness, I sprang to my feet, resolutely putting down both my fears and my fatigue.

Won't Fail Father.

"I'll not fail you, Father," I wafted the message into space, and went directly to my pantry from which I brought cooking utensils and the various supplies I knew Katie would need for the midnight supper I meant to have ready for my guests when they should arrive.

"Guests?" I repeated to myself the words my father had used in his code message.

"Prepare for four guests," he had written. "Put two of them in barred room, two single beds."

Did that mean they were really guests to be guarded, or was there something in Katie's wildly-fantastic surmise that two of the coming "guests" were criminals caught in my father's net, who had to be kept with the utmost secrecy, and therefore had been sent to us at the farmhouse which belonged to my father and which he had used more than once before to trap and house dangerous conspirators against the government.

I brought myself up with the stern reminder that the status of my guests could make no possible difference to me or to the preparations I meant to make for them, and with the urge to be "doing something," which any emergency involving waiting brings to me, I measured coffee into the percolator, filled it with cold water and set it aside, ready to be popped on the stove the moment the travelers should arrive.

I was just arranging my baking board and bowl for the preparation of hot biscuits when Dicky came through the open door with the captain of the state troopers following him.

"Captain ——— wants Jim," Dicky said. "He asked me if Jim knows all our friends and tradesmen, so that he can advise the guards about the cordon to be thrown around the place, and I told him he sure did. Where is Jim now?"

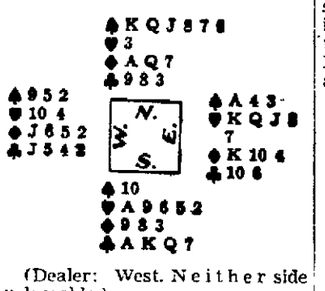
"The Authority on Authorities"

TROTECT YOUR ENTRY

THAT SINGLE ENTRY to cash the dummy's king-queen-jack type of suit is vital to your entire enterprise. If holding up your ace on the originally led trick will give the defenders a chance to whack at the entry before your suit is set up, you must forestall them. Win the first trick, if you can possibly afford to, and get in a quick lead of the dummy's long suit at once before the entry can be molested.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

After a pass by West, North began the auction here with 1-Spade, East called 2-Hearts and South doubled. North went to 2-Spades, South 2-No Trumps. North 3-Spades and South 3-No Trumps.

The heart 10 was led by West and, when South refused the trick, West switched to the diamond 2. His hope was that, as North had rebid spades and South had refused the suit, East might hold the A, in which event the entry to dummy should be knocked out at once. East won the trick and returned the diamond 10. Declarer won with the A and played the spade K. East allowed the first trick to win but went in on the second round.

South should have won the first trick and immediately gone after spades, while retaining an entry in dummy. In that way the contract would have been sure, as East could win only three hearts and a spade.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, July 24.

Sunday's horoscope is not an entirely propitious one, as there are disintegrating and disruptive situations to menace some very auspicious and promising conditions. There may be intrigue or treachery, but with caution and the support of very wise friends there may be benefits through writings or speculative enterprises.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year in which there may be much profit through speculation, by means of writings or kindred subjects. But there also are signs of treachery and possibly a bereavement offsetting very favorable auguries.

A child born on this day may be particularly versatile, quick, ambitious and energetic, rising in life through its initiative, energy and the co-operation of solid friends.

For Monday, July 25.

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather hazardous one, especially where money is concerned, although matters may move at rather high pressure and with telling initiative. The danger is from bad loans or a tendency to plunge into untried enterprises.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very active and enterprising year, with the energies and faculties under highly-creative urges. Where projects are of sound merit, the support and co-operation of superiors, friends and capital are assured, but be wise in making loans and assuming debts.

A child born on this day may be energetic, talented, enterprising and ambitious, and may succeed in practical and constructive lines. But it may be easy with money and run into debt.

A Farmer's Diary

By Calvin A. Byers

COWS GET HOMESICK

WE BOUGHT a cow. Her name was Lassie, and she was one of the sleekest, most docile of a neighbor's choice herd. For many years, milk for our table had been bought from the dairyman who owned her, and when we moved, the idea of taking with us one of these fine, familiar animals appealed to our sense of fitness and sentiment.

Alas, we reckoned without our cow! She arrived, via high-racked trailer, and was turned into the pasture. It is a pleasant pasture, with shade and running water. There was a dozen pretty yearling heifers to keep her company. Did she appreciate the place? She did not. She ramped around the field, started a riot among the yearlings and bawled incessantly. At milking time she gave only half what we expected.

"Oh, well," we said, "she'll get over it in a few days. It isn't natural for a cow to hold up her milk under the circumstances. She was never moved in her life before."

We took turns coaxing her with tidbits. She ignored them. After a day or two the amount of milk increased a little. We were encouraged. Every morning and night we opened the barn stall and put a gallon of ground mash—corn, oats and bran—into her box. She did not eat it. Every morning and night, at regular time, the hired man milked her. The milk was good, but steadily the amount of it dwindled. We sprayed the animal to keep off the flies; we washed and curried and coaxed her. She permitted our manifestations of affection, looked at us with big, hurt, brown eyes—and bawled. As soon as she was unloosed from the stall, she turned and went swiftly out, without a backward glance.

This continued for two weeks. The amount of milk grew less and less. The cow's ribs began to show, under her sleek hair. Finally we could stand it no longer. We put her in the trailer again, and took her home. She ran to her own stall and began to gulp her mash, in hungry mouthfuls.

CHAPTER XII

"Oh, well—if that's the way you feel about it," he said, and gave her arm a forward tug.

They walked somewhat faster than before. Ray was thoroughly provoked at him but trying to conceal it. She must inveigle more information out of him.

"Tell me, Hal—please," she begged. "What did you mean by what you said—"

"I've nothing further to offer at present," he returned coolly. You'll discover soon enough."

Ray was gripped with fear. It was apparent that whatever Hal knew about Frank Armstrong, he did not choose to reveal it.

Upon reaching the farmhouse porch, Ray was taken completely by surprise. Two men stood there dimly outlined by the light of lantern and lamp held by the farmer and his wife in the doorway. Frank Armstrong and Roger Paine waited there, grinning sheepishly at the oncoming crowd. Their clothes in shreds, their faces were streaked with blood.

"Of all things! Frank and Roger!" sang out Heddie White. "Where did you come from—what on earth happened to you? You don't look as if you'd met any classy woodland nymph."

"No—it wasn't exactly a nymph we met up with, was it Armstrong?" came from Roger.

"I should say not! It was real—exceptionally real," said Frank cryptically.

"A bear, of course," snickered Susie Craft hysterically. "Big brave men fight big bad bear to a finish."

Every one but Ray laughed. She stepped quickly up to Frank, looking at him closely as he stood in the narrow kitchen doorway, the reflection from the lamp, held high by the farmer's wife behind, falling full on his dirty, blood-smeared features. His collar and tie were missing, the front of his once white shirt hung in shreds, his tweed coat looked as if it had been yanked in a fierce struggle. The patch-pockets on the outside were torn and dangling.

* * *

She shot a glance at Roger leaning against the doorjamb. He looked thoroughly exhausted and both his eyes were badly swollen. His ruined clothes matched Frank's in every respect. It came to her instantly that they might have been fighting each other. But—why? Had their common interest in pearls brought them to grief? They seemed friendly enough now. Yet it was peculiar that they should be together; their very demeanor was peculiar, and the explanation of their recent actions was oddly vague.

"We'll have to phone for the bus at Milltown," Heddie suddenly remembered.

"I've already called — the bus will be along in a few minutes," said Frank.

Suddenly, Ray had an impulse to do something shocking. If she could jar Frank Armstrong into confessing what he was up to, it would be well worth the effort.

She delved into her coat and snatched out Stella's pearls.

"Hi, gang!" she called out dramatically, and held up the necklace. "Here are your pearls safe and sound, Stella. Bears, nymphs, or—or thugs didn't get them, darling."

She laughed up into Frank's scowling face and put the necklace into the startled Stella's hands.

"Lucky again!" remarked Stella cynically, taking the necklace as if it were a live coal. "I don't know how to thank you, darling!"

"Pearls!" gasped the horrified Heddie White.

The incident put a distinct damper on the spirits of every member of the crowd. They stood about in silence. The meow of a cat on the barnyard fence, the hoot of an owl, only added sinister meaning to the tenseness.

Frank Armstrong leaned down to whisper angrily in Ray's ear, "You—you little fool!"

* * *

Ray swung from Frank Armstrong thoroughly incensed. How dared he call her a fool! He didn't even have the courtesy to thank her for saving the pearls when it was apparent he had recently been through a terrific struggle because of them. If not, because of what?

"Ray — how did you get my necklace?" Stella asked unsteadily.

"It's enough that you have them, isn't it?" replied Ray with a toss of her head.

She edged out to the dim shadows on the rim of the crowd of astonished excursion party guests, her cold fists dashing tears from her hot eyes. She got out her compact and powdered her nose in the dark, while beginning a nonsensical line of talk with Jerry Teal, a man she had never particularly noticed before. She had very little idea what she was saying and cared less. Frank Armstrong needn't think that he could call her a little fool and get away with it. That was the last she would take from him. A man who lets you down after an absolute kindness to him is dumb — just dumb, she said to herself furiously.

A big bus now dashed into the yard like a monstrous charging elephant. Heddie White's friends sighed with relief and began piling into the bus's brilliantly lighted interior which seemed to bring them back to civilization and safety once again.

* * *

Frank Armstrong went up front and said something in an undertone to the driver, then sat down beside Stella. The bus slid swiftly out the drive and along the road toward Mumford.

Unexpectedly, when they came to the place where the crowd had recently emerged from the wood, Frank called out, "All right, driver!" and the bus abruptly stopped.

Frank and Roger lost no time in getting out, paying no attention to the questions of the curious crowd. Faces pressed to the bus windows expressed dismay as the figures of the two men melted into the black depth of the wood.

"This is a funny piece of business," Hal Williams sputtered to Ray. "What's got into those fellows?"

Ray was too filled with suspense to answer. Hal lit a cigarette and went to stand on the rear steps.

* * *

Ray sat alone, elbows on the window-sill, her face cupped in her two hands, straining her eyes to pierce the mystery. But all she could see was a terrifying expanse of blank darkness, the weirdness of which seemed to be affecting the now silent crowd. The steady croaking of frogs and singing of insects came through the bus like a gruesome warning. Ray shivered with apprehension. There was no explanation for this interruption of the return trip to the city. There could be none until the two men returned.

Within ten minutes, they came into sight again. Between them they were lugging the inanimate body of a huge man.

Exclamations of mingled horror and surprise came in a chorus as, with the assistance of the driver, the man was laid across a rear seat. The bus passengers gathered around to appraise the forbidding-looking fellow in sodden torn shirt and trousers.

Heddie White exclaimed, "That man was one of the waiters on the Lily Bell! I took an hors d'oeuvre from his tray! What's the matter with him—why did you bring him here?"

"So he can be arrested for assault when we get him to town," Roger informed Heddie promptly. "He evidently swam out from the Lily Bell. He lit into Frank back there in the wood—the rest of you were so far ahead you didn't hear the commotion. I happened to be near Frank and between us, we brought this fellow down—but he sure was tough. Maybe we ought to sign up for a championship bout, Frank."

Roger's humor was ill-timed. Frank made a poor attempt at a grin and sat down opposite the prisoner, who was stirring slightly as if about to regain consciousness.

"That creature must have heard that Frank had Stella's pearls in his pocket," remarked Ray thoughtfully on her way back to her seat, closely followed by Hal.

She sat down and the bus got under way again. She burst out, her eyes wide, "Why! He could be the pearl thief! He may be the man who's wanted for all the pearl robberies — even Anna Cook's murder!"

"Humph!" came from Hal, plainly disgusted. He dropped to the seat beside her. "What an unsophisticated woman you can be on occasion! Doesn't it occur to you that Frank Armstrong could have staged this fight exhibition to shift suspicion from himself to someone else?"

"No—I—I hadn't thought of it," she said slowly, the suggestion somehow linking up several moves recently made by the mystifying Frank.

"He's got Roger buffaloed, too. Roger seems to think Armstrong's on the level."

"But why should Frank go to such extremes?" came from her faintly.

"Because things are closing up on him, that's why," Hal said sharply. "It's perfectly plain. He'll blow town one of these days."

"I believe you're jealous," stated Ray flatly.

"Hardly. What has he to give a girl like you? Oh—before I forget—father has bought me a honey of a yacht. I'm getting up a party for a two-weeks' cruise in October. You and I will plan the course — and you'll be official hostess."

"Good gracious, Hal—why bring that up now? I'm so upset over —over everything I'm not interested in cruises."

"Very well—skip it," flared Hal crossly, and went to sit across the aisle with Chuck Barnes.

* * *

Stella left Howard Tuff and came to sit with Ray. She asked, low, "What do you make of all this ruction Ray?"

"I'm sorry to have to remind you, darling, that you began it. You brought pearls along tonight—and pearls these times are as deadly as number one gangsters — and certainly call them out".

"Yes, I know—I'm always taking chances." Stella sighed dejectedly. "I meant to take the darn things down to the bank—and forgot it. But I shan't worry any more tonight. Frank is stopping at the police station with the prisoner — and he'll leave the necklace there with the officers. When the bank opens this morning, I'll have a cordon of police, if necessary to escort me to my safety deposit box."

"Fine! Only be sure you don't lose them again tonight."

Stella's enormous black eyes stared at Ray in consternation. She hastily flung open her bottle-green jacet. "Mercy, Ray!" she protested. "You make me positively feverish! That—that awful fellow back there on the seat! He looks as if he could commit any crime and love it. Don't worry—I'll keep an eye on him when I turn over the pearls. But tell me—how did you get them?"

"I heard Frank had them in his pocket. Clinton Hoover saw you give them to Frank. So on impulse, when we were going through the wood, I took them from Frank's pocket and dropped them into mine. Clinton is such a talker. I knew he'd probably told every one on the boat that Frank had your pearls—and it wasn't safe."

"You took some chance! You ought to have a medal for bravery. You certainly saved the pearls. In that awful fight, they would have been strewn all over the wood. I don't know how to thank you."

"Don't try—but next time, lock them up."

The bus was now entering the town. In a few minutes, the driver pulled the brakes before the police station. Frank and Roger assisted the now conscious, but strangely subdued prisoner down the bus steps and into the station. Stella went with them.

* * *

Ray wondered if it were her duty to follow but resisted the temptation. It might look to Frank as if she were too greatly interested in him—and of course this should be far from the truth. Yet how far it was, she could not decide. In spite of all the suspicion of him that she could not entirely fling aside, her torn emotions forced her to cling to an inner vestige of faith in him. It was an absurd situation to be in and she hated herself for it.

One by one, the jaded party guests left the bus at their homes. Ray reached hers in a confused state of mind. It was the one place she had wanted to reach just now and yet she dreaded to be alone with her own milling thoughts. Her Aunt Lucy would be asleep and Mimi had been told not to wait up for her.

She got into bed at last and tried to release her tight muscles. Her head ached nearly as much as her back. Every time she closed her eyes, the lids felt as if they were being thumped by tiny iron mallets. Every nerve in her body tingled with sleeplessness. Her heart was in a turmoil of indecision. Deliberately, she thought in circles of every one and everything but Frank Armstrong, only in the end to find his image mirrored in her mind just where she had left it. There was no use in denying it. She couldn't put Frank Armstrong out of her mind.

NEW CROP OF MOVIES TO BRING FILM'S BRIGHTEST STARS HERE

The summer and fall movie screens will glitter with the brightest stars as the new crop of pictures is harvested early this season. Starting Sunday, Warner Brothers' theaters in Mansfield will launch their summer-fall program, about a month or six weeks earlier than in other years.

Theater men pointed out that some of the biggest pictures produced on the 1938 schedule will be shown here within a few months, and that seldom, if ever, has a summer season been marked with so many class A pictures being released from all studios.

Warner Brothers, who control three Mansfield theaters—Ohio, Madison and Majestic—will have two A pictures here on the summer-fall program: "Four's a Crowd" with Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland and Rosalind Russell, and the firm version of the big stage hit, "Boy Meets Girl," with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Marie Wilson. Other pictures from that studio will be the mystery play "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" with Edward G. Robinson; "Racket Busters" with Humphrew Bogart and George Brent; and "Sister Act," with the three Lane sisters.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will also contributte two A pictures—stars of the first rank—within a few weeks: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan and Frank Morgan in "The Crowd Roars" and "Too Hot To Handle" with Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Walter Pidgeon.

Most important of the RKO product for the coming season is the Marx Brothers in the stage howl "Room Service."

United Artists have three first class pictures almost ready for relaese—Charles Boyer in "Algiers," "Young In Heart," with Janet Gaynor, Douglas Farbanks, jr., and the practically mythical Paulette Goddard Chaplin; and "There Goes My Heart," which brings Fredric March back to the screen after his stage fiasco.

Twentieth Century-Fox will contribute four A pictures, at least three of which should bring business bounding to the box office—Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Broadway;" Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche in "Alexander's Rag Time Band;" and "My Lucky Star," with the dimpled Sonja Heine. That company too, will send out a Warner Baxter film, "I'll Give a Million."

Deanna Durbin in "That Certain Age" will come from Universal studies.

Sunday, the opening of the new season brings Bob Burns and Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland to the Ohio in "Tropic Holiday;" "Love Finds Andy Hardy" to the Madison, and "Reformatory" with Jack Holt to the Majestic.

STRIKE FIRST BLOW IN SEMI-PRO TITLE SERIES SUNDAY

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

AT 3 P. M. SUNDAY, out at the Fairground, the first blow to determine the semi-professional baseball championship of the city will be struck

Involved in the series are the American Legion and Herrick's Hi-Speed clubs, which have been exchanging fighting glares ever since the curtain on the current season was rung up.

The series was not planned until later in the season, but the withdrawal of the Legionnaires' Sunday foe from the Central Ohio circuit this week enabled the two enemies to get together tomorrow.

When he remaining games of the series will be played is doubtful due to the Central league tilts involving the Legionnaires, but they will be staged as soon as possible according to the managers, Dewey Durant of the Legion and Earl Herrick of the Hi-Speeds.

Both clubs are composed of hustling, young ball players, and the type of ball they present on the fair lot Sunday should be of high order

While neither team has attracted any record crowds this season, the game Sunday should see the largest assemblage of the year if not one of the biggest throngs to witness a semi-pro battle in the city for a number of seasons.

Pilot Durant has announced Donald Dudley as his pitching selection, with Pete Beer toiling for the Hi-Speeds. Dudley has had little opportunity with the Legionnaires so far this season but he has shown enough in his few appearances to deserve the starting assignment, Durant said.

Herrick has one of the finest Mansfield pitching products in Beer, whose lack of size has not interfered with his winning. Beer has hung up something like seven victories in 10 games.

Herrick will place a well-balanced ball club on the field Heading the Hi-Speeds' cast is Bob De Haven, whose play at short and hitting has featured the Herrick team's season. Martz De Haven, a brother, has held down third base in good fashion. Jim Wallace and Bob Ganaway fill out the infield.

The Herrick twins, Earl and Clarence, and Schmidt will undoubtedly patrol the outfield for the Hi-Speeds, with Max Scott donning the mask and windpad

The Legionnaires' lineup will be only slightly changed Sunday. Ed Chatlain will be pulled in from the outfield to take over the first station chores in the absence of Ed Henrich. Russ Hoff will take his place in the garden alongside of Freddy Lewis, who goes and gets 'em like a Tris Speaker, and Lloyd Beal.

Butch Shaffer, Junior Keister and Dick Donnan, one of the batting leaders in the Central league will assist Chatlain in the infield. Burgraff will probably be back of the plate.

Bobby Fails Again

BOB FELLER . . . his failures hurt Indians.

Feller Unable to Go Route for Fifth Time In Less Than Four Weeks as Sox Win, 7 to 4.

BOSTON—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians has a case of pitcher trouble brought on by Bob Feller's defeat yesterday at the hands of the Boston Red Sox

Feller failed to go the nine-inning route for the fifth time in less than four weeks He yielded five hits and four runs in three innings as the Sox scored a 7-to-4 victory and prevented the Tribe from catching the idle New York Yankees

"Frankly, I'm bitterly disappointed in the kid" said Vitt "He must have had more stuff than this last year But what's worrying me is where it has gone. He hasn't looked lately like the kind of pitcher who could strike out 15, 16 or 17 hitters in a ball game"

Needs Control.

To Feller himself, Vitt remarked solemnly.

"Bob, I've seen lots of pitchers with as much stuff as you've got and more, and they never amounted to a damn because they didn't know where the ball was going when they turned it loose

"You've got to make up your mind to perfect your control or you'll never be a major league pitcher"

Vitt has another worry in Johnny Allen. The temperamental twirler hasn't pitched in two weeks because of a sore arm Vitt wonders if Allen can pick up where he left off—a point Johnny has a chance to prove in today's game.

Mel Harder's triumph over the Yankees this week was one source of comfort for Ol' Os

Living up to expectations and fulfilling the rosy promises made for him Feller pitched great ball for the first one-third of the current campaign and his hurling kept the Indians on top in the tight American league race.

Just Another Pitcher.

For the past month however, Feller has been just another pitcher and not a very good one at that Since June 28 he has turned in only one victory for the Tribe and over that four weeks' stretch has finished only a single encounter that he has started

With a chance to go into a tie for first place with the idle New York Yankees yesterday, Vitt sent Feller to the mound against the Red Sox

With a 2 to 1 lead going into the third inning Feller blew up A single, a walk and successive doubles by 'Pinky' Higgins and Bobby Doerr gave the Red Sox three runs and established a lead the Tribe was never able to overcome

Cleveland scored single counters in the fourth and seventh rounds, but Boston pushed across a run in the sixth off Denny Galehouse and two more in the eighth at the expense of Johnny Humphries

Jack Wilson always tough for Cleveland, was touched for 10 hits but kept them well distributed The victory was Wilson's eighth of the season and three of those triumphs have been over the Indians

Pace Tribal Attack.

Cleveland's attack was paced by Billy Campbell and Sammy Hale each of whom collected two hits The three Tribe pitchers gave up but six of which were doubles

Johnny Allen on the shelf for two weeks with a sore arm was to work his second game of the season for the Indians with Rookie Jim Bagby opposing him

Mohicans Get One Hit, Win

Donnan's Double Only Safety Obtained Off Au.

Donnan's double was the only hit obtained by the Mohican Chevrolets in their city recreation Senior baseball league game at Liberty park yesterday, but the Automen won 2 to 1

Au issued six walks to help the Chevrolets in their scoring in the five-inning game

Al Boyer yielded only three hits and struck out six while walking only one The Parks only run came on Webb's circuit clout in the second

Chevrolets Point For Lucas Game

Encouraged by their victory over the Mt Vernon Shellmars the Mohican Chevrolets will attempt to add another scalp to their belt Sunday when they travel to Lucas

They engage one of the strongest teams in the Lucas club which has won 10 out of 13 games Manager Bob Martin has not announced his pitching choice

Johns, Prospect Teams Battle For City League Lead Monday

The deadlock for first place in the City Class A softball league will be broken Monday when the Johns and Prospect park teams collide at Johns park.

The Johnnies, first half champions, and Prospecters are undefeated in the second half, and the result of their meeting Monday will have a definite bearing on the outcome of the championship

Manager Johnny Valentine's club is confident that it can take the Johnnies into camp and halt the six-game winning streak of Jimmy Fullager

Prospect lost to Fullager in the only game it faced him but Valentine appears sincere in his belief that his team can stop him Monday.

The Prospecters incidentally, are the only club which has beaten Johns park this season.

The Richland county fish and game association of North park will be host to Liberty park in the other game This should be another interesting game tussle.

Each team has won a game from the other so far this season, and the outcome of Monday's tilt is questionable.

Of course, both teams will be anxious to win as the loser will take undisputed hold of the basement position

Grimm To Broadcast Game Of Ex-charges

CHICAGO — (UP) — Charlie Grimm, deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs, today signed to do play by play descriptions of major league baseball games for radio station WBBM of Chicago. Grimm will start his daily broadcasts tomorrow, officials of the station announced.

Grimm now is on his Missouri farm where he went yesterday after cleaning out his locker and desk at Wrigley field to make way for Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett who replaced him as Cub manager Wednesday.

One Home Run Costs Club 200 Season Passes

AMERICUS, Ga. —(AP)— The fans cheered when First Baseman Ed Hartness of Americus hit a long home run over the wall of the new baseball park here in Thursday's Georgia-Florida league game with Thomasville.

Today, club officials groaned when they counted the cost of that same home run. They had offered a season pass to the person naming the Americus player who might perform the over-the-wall feat in that particular game. Two hundred fans picked Hartness.

Dizzy's 'Sore Arm' Due Again Today

Unpredictable Dean to Tackle Pennant-Seeking Giants In One Game of Double-Header.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR., Associated Press Sports Writer.

A LOT of fans who have been trying since last Sunday to figure out what a sore arm means to a pitcher may get the answer today. For Dizzy is due to go again

The unpredictable Jerome Herman (or is it Jay Hanna?) Dean, absent from the baseball wars from early May to mid-July, made an amazing return when he stopped the light-hitting Boston Bees with four hits. Today he has to show whether he can make the comeback stick when he faces the pennant-seeking New York Giants in one game of a double-header, created when the teams were rained out yesterday

Other Comebacks.

If old Diz can prove he's back to stay, the fans can turn their attention to the possibility of another come-back—that of Black Mike Cochrane—or such current affairs as Pittsburgh's persistent victory streak, the batting of Wally Berger—a big factor in keeping Cincinnati in the National league race—or Cleveland's last-ditch effort to recapture the American league leadership.

Cochrane received permission from Walter O Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers to seek reinstatement as an active player, but he didn't actually say yesterday that he would try to come back and replace the "boaned" Rudy York and seek to pull the Tigers out of sixth place.

Berger, another "comebacker" since he's back with Manager Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati, for whom he did some heavy hitting in Boston a couple of years ago, played an important role in the Reds' even break with the Phillies yesterday He clouted two homers, one in the opener which Cincinnati won, 5-2, and the other in a seven-run rally that prevented a rout as the Phils won the afterpiece, 11-10

The Pirates leading the Giants by two games marked up their 20th victory in 25 games since they started the winning streak that carried them to the top, when they edged out the Boston Bees, 4-3 Cy Blanton's pitching and Paul Waner's hitting were so effective that even a ninth-inning homer by Vince DiMaggio with one on base couldn't spoil it.

Ends Nats' String.

St. Louis was featured in both the day's other games as rain halted the White Sox-Yankees and Detroit-Athletics' contests. The Browns ended Washington's four-game winning streak by pounding out a 9-7 decision The Cards battered Brooklyn for six runs in the first and went on to win 12-3 for their biggest scoring splurge since June 2.

Storm Halts Chicago Play

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill.—(UP)—Cut short by high winds, rain and severe lightning, Chicago's $5,000 open golf tournament started all over again today on a reduced route of 54 holes instead of the originally scheduled 72

Almost 100 golfers had not finished the first round when the electrical storm swept over the tournament course at Olympia fields yesterday. It became so bad that veteran Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware Pa., who went through a similar storm in the Kansas City open early this year picked up and walked off the course

Tournament officials agreed to erase all first round scores—including a 67 by Ernest (Dutch) Harrison of Oak Park—and cut the meet to one 18-hole round today and two tomorrow.

CLAIMS BRITISH NOT FAVORABLE TO LABOR LAW

London Authority Says Labor There Would Not Accept America's Program.

Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series of dispatches by the European manager of the United Press on employe-employer relationships in Great Britain and Sweden.

By WEBB MILLER
(UP Staff Correspondent)

LONDON—The dominant principal that guides British labor in its relations with management is "keep away from the courts."

That is what I was told by one of the leading authorities on the British trade union law when I asked him to explain the essential differences between labor legislation in Great Britain and the United States. For professional reasons he requested that his name not be used.

The commission which President Roosevelt has appointed to study industrial relations in Great Britain and Sweden will find wide divergence between the British and American systems, this expert said.

"Broadly speaking," he added, "trade union officials in Great Britain would not accept the American national labor relations act as a gift for it violates one of the deepest instincts of British labor which is 'keep away from the courts.'

"The essence of the American law is that a trade union pact with an employer is something that in the last resort is enforceable by a court of law. That makes a British trade union official shudder. He wants trade pacts to be kept flexible and enforceable only by the willing consent of both parties to the agreement

One Act For Courts.

"We have, I think, only one example in this country of an agreement enforceable in the courts. Parliament in 1934 passed a novel act applying only to the weaving section of the cotton trade. The act stipulated that employes and employers were empowered to agree on a wage scale which, when approved by the minister of labor, becomes enforceable in courts of law.

"There is only one union in all of Great Britain which toys with the idea of making trade pacts enforceable in the courts. That is the national union of general and municipal workers which is influenced by the fact that it is often dealing with small firms in trades where employers are unorganized (in employer federations) and where there is considerable breaking of agreements. But practically all other trade unions dislike the idea."

"There is no general law in Great Britain compelling an employer to recognize a union. The nearest thing to direct legal compulsion on an employer is the railway acts of 1921. That act combined all railways into four great systems and established the machinery for settling labor disputes in the form of a board composed of representatives of the railroads and representatives of the three great railway unions.

"You might imagine that those three railway unions would be highly flattered at being given statutory recognition in the law of the land, but they are not really. They did not complain about it, but they did not relish it for it was too rigid. If one of the three unions should split into two unions because of internal strain, then it would take an act of parliament to clean up the mess."

"In regard to jurisdictional disputes between rival unions, the British employer has no protection, legal or otherwise, although he could appeal to the minister of labor for assistance. The labor minister has no powers whatsoever in a case like that, but he does have a fair amount of influence."

(Tomorrow—The British Trades Boards System).

JURIST SETS UP BEER BAR IN COURT AS BARTENDING LESSON

CHICAGO—(INS)—After turning the bar of justice into a real bar, Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green hoped he had solved the question "how much foam should there be on a glass of beer?"

When eight saloon keepers were arraigned before him on charges of giving short measure by putting big "collars" on steins of beer, Judge Green, like a magician pulling props from the air, whisked several glasses and steins and a number of iced bottles of beer from under the bench. He placed them on the bar of justice.

"Now," he announced, "I shall give you a lecture on high collars."

With that he set to work, pouring glasses of beer until he finally got one with a collar just right.

"There," he said, "is something for you to shoot at."

With the mercury outside in the high 80's and the courtroom very hot, tongues were hanging out all over the court. The jurist, however, didn't pass the beer around.

Judge Green explained he thought his lesson in bartending would prove more effective to the saloon keepers than a fine.

Slaves were emancipated in New Hampshire in 1783.

FARMERS PARE DEBTS ON LAND TO 17-YEAR LOW

Mortgages Now Believed to Be Less Than 7 Billions, Department Reports.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The farm-mortgage debt has reached the lowest figure in 17 years, according to the department of agriculture bureau of agricultural economics.

The bureau said that the amount probably has declined considerably from the last available figure of $7,254,821,000 on Jan. 1, 1937, and now may be below $7,000,000,000.

Figures compiled by the bureau show that the farm-mortgage debt declined nearly $2,000,000,000 between the high point in 1930 and 1937. Most of the decline resulted from foreclosures between 1930 and 1935.

Increased income since 1935 has enabled many farmers to reduce their mortgages through cash payments, the bureau said. Some reduction was made also by downward adjustments by public and private lending agencies.

Exceeded Sale Price.

The bureau, discussing the marked changes in the capital structure of agriculture since 1929, said that land values were written sharply down as farm income decreased during the depression; that many farms were sold for less than the mortgage debt.

But during the past five years, the bureau said, a large part of this loss has been recovered through rising farm values. And while farm values increased, farm-mortgage debt declined.

"Changes in the amount of farm-mortgage debt during 1935 and 1936 reflect largely two opposite forces: (1) liquidation of debt primarily through distress transfers; (2) increases in debt through greater activity in the volume of land transfers," the bureau said.

The number of foreclosures, or "distress transfers," has declined steadily in the past four years. The bureau estimated there were 18 foreclosures per 1,000 farmers in the year ended March 1, 1937, compared with 20 in 1936, 21 in 1935 and 28 in 1934.

Private Lending Declines.

The importance of federal agencies in farm lending has increased steadily since 1930. Life insurance companies, banks, state and private lending agencies have decreased their holdings.

On Jan. 1, 1937, the Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank Commissioners held 40 per cent of all outstanding farm-mortgage debt, compared with 38 per cent a year earlier, 33 per cent in 1935 and 13 per cent in 1930.

Life insurance companies at the start of 1937 held only 13 per cent of all farm mortgage debt, compared with 23 per cent in 1930. Join-stock land banks held less than 2 per cent of the total mortgage debt on Jan. 1, 1937, as contrasted with 7 per cent of the much larger total in 1930.

Other lending groups—individuals, banks, official state and county agencies, mortgage companies and miscellaneous lenders—held 45 per cent of the total in 1937 compared with 57 per cent in 1930.

THEATER

FILM producers often make blunders. Take the casting of Joan Bennett in "The Texans." She is cast as a runner of arms through a blockade; she helps drive 10,000 cattle through blizzards, Indian attacks and prairie fires—and in each scene she has a fresh costume and that Park avenue wave in her hair. . . Mildred Harris Lloyd is credited with having had a hand in Lloyd's new smash hit, "Professor Beware." It was she who talked the comedian into abandoning his "high brow comedy" and getting back to the old slap stick. The result is said to be one of the greatest comedies in years, and even now is starting a swing of other pictures back to slap stick.

* * *

"Tropic Holiday."

For the first time in her brief movie career, Martha Raye has a role in which she can button up her mouth and refrain from the strange noises. In other words, she has her first straight comedy role in "Tropic Holiday," which opens at the midnight matinee tonight at the Ohio. Bob Burns is a senator from Oklahoma and Ray Milland is the Hollywood writer who goes to the tropics to "get away from it all," but finds a luscious gal, Dorothy Lamour, who makes him forget everything, even Binnie Barnes. There are a lot of pretty girls in the action and foreign character actors. Tito Guizar, opera and radio star, is one of the musical attractions of the picture.

* * *

"Love Finds Andy Hardy."

The title is a fine indication of what to expect in the latest of the Judge Hardy family series. The picture, after it was made, was such a hit that the company decided to release it as a regular feature. Andy Hardy, the Judge's adolescent son, who just can't control his wild desire to kiss every pretty girl he sees, finds "love" at last. Or rather, it finds Andy. Not only does Andy get to the point where he is going to wear a dress suit but he threatens to shave! Three pretty girls, each with a different line of attack, surround Andy, to his joyous worry. Mickey Rooney is Andy, and the girls are Judy Garland, Ann Rutherford and Lana Turner. Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker and Fay Holden represent the Hardy family as usual. The film's booked for the Madison.

* * *

"Reformatory."

A reform school for boys, which made criminals of them rather than reforming them, is the background for "Reformatory," coming to the Majestic Sunday. Jack Holt has the featured role as the superintendent who comes to the reformatory just after a boy has been killed while attempting to escape. He institutes a series of reforms in dealing with the young criminals and the action deals with these and the inside intrigue of the institution. Charlotte Wynters provides romance as the woman psychiatrist at the reformatory. Among the boys are Frankie Darro, Tommy Bupp and others. "To The Victor," the second feature, is a Gaumont British film, with a dog for a hero.

* * *

"Wide Open Faces."

Joe E. Brown takes his followers for a dizzying spin in his last picture, "Wide Open Faces," which the Ritz presents Sunday and Monday. The film has more than the usual number of Brown stunts in it, and in addition is a more than ordinarily interesting yarn. The action takes place in a deserted inn which is supposed to be the hiding place of a fortune in loot. Brown is the soda jerker who becomes famous for rounding up a gang of crooks, members of which come to the inn from all parts of the country. They practically tear up the inn to find the loot, and when they do find it, there is a fast and furious climax. Jane Wyman, the late Lyda Roberti, Alison Skipworth and Lucien Littlefield are in it. This was the vivacious Roberti's last picture before her death.

MOTORS PULL MARKET OUT OF DOLDRUMS

Leading Issues Step Up Fractions To Two Points After Hesitant Start.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(INS)—The stock market jumped to new highs for the year today, as a last half-hour wave of buying lifted stocks 1 to 3 points.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Buying support for motors pulled the stock market out of the doldrums today and leading issues stepped up fractions to a point with a few ahead 2 or so.

The list got off to a hesitant start, with minor advances only a shade in the majority. During the last hour the ticker tape frequently was at a standstill and and numerous issues were unchanged. Volume picked up somewhat in the closing period and transfers approximated 550,000 shares.

In addition to the automotive group, which was aided by better prospects for sales and production this fall, selected steel, coppers, rails, rubbers, mail orders, farm implements and specialties tilted forward.

Moving picture company stocks, recently depressed by the action of the government in starting anti-trust proceedings against the principal film concerns, did a smart come-back. Loew's, Paramount,, Pathe and Warner Bros. retrieved sizable portions of their week's losses.

Reports from steel centers of another jump next week in mill operations to a new top for 1938 to date gave a fillip to this department.

Ralis were none too buoyant, but some of these continued to reflect hopes for further traffic improvement and the possibility of a wage cut compromise.

Utilities, on the whole, were neglected as holders exhibited some discouragement over latest shots taken by the S. E. C. at holding companies. Bonds were better in spots.

Brokers said selling of stocks from abroad had been more pronounced in the past several days, especially from Londoners who bought at the start of the "baby boom" and desired to cash profits.

7 DAYS OF RAIN DRENCH STATES ON SEABOARD

Electrical Storm Here Just Echo Of Torrential Rains That Flood East.

An electrical storm that hit Mansfield last night was little more than an echo of the storms and torrential raiins that still drenched the eastern seaboard today, from Maine to Virginia, menacing highway travel, causing thousands of dollars of crop damage and putting an effective damper on outdoor sports and amusements in that area.

There were thundershowers here intermittently yesterday from late afternoon until late last night. Yesterday's maximum temperature was 85 while the low was 58 last night. At noon today it had climbed up to 80 and little change in temperatures is predicted.

The weather forecast today is for fair tonight and Sunday, with probable thunder showers late this afternoon.

Rains Continue.

Record breaking rains continued today in the states east of the Appalachian mountains.

New York's great beaches, generally jammed at this season with thousands of persons, were sodden and gloomy today after seven days of cloudy weather and rain.

Steady downpours in the Catskills isolated a number of villages, washed out roads and bridges, and shifted ancient boulders as if they were so many pebbles. Property damage was estimated to run into several hundred thousand dollars.

Rains, carried on high winds, struck the Rochester, N. Y., area last night. Lightning struck at least six buildings causing an estimated $10,000 damage.

Niagara Falls reported a bad storm, hitting the city intermittently throughout the night. Cellars were flooded and some damage was done to business stocks.

Albany reported rain for 14 days this month.

High water stalled nearly 100 cars on the Saw Mill river parkway between Pleasantville and Hawthorne and some 200 between Yonkers and White Plains. White Plains reported 6.62 inches of rain since Monday.

In Eastern Pennsylvania rain has fallen for seven days, and crops were reported to have suffered the greatest damage in years.

Hutchison, president of the county organization has named as delegates to the national meeting Weldon, Judge Huston, and Attorneys Lewis Brucker, William F. Black and W. H. Gifford. Other lawyers from the city and county plan to attend some of the sessions.

More than 5,000 delegates are expected for this 61st annual meeting of the national association, and many are already in Cleveland for pre-convention activities.

Washington officialdom and leaders of the profession of the United States, Canada and Eng will be represented at the convention.

renew a feud that began a year ago at a hearing before the senate post office committee in connection with a resolution to investigate the stopping of mail trucks seeking to enter Republic plants during the steel strike.

"Tom Girdler was kind enough to call me a liar," Murray said, recalling that incident. "Well, Tom is that kind of a citizen, I suppose."

The committee recessed until Wednesday, La Follette completed five days of continuous hearing by filling the record with evidence of Republic police activity in labor espionage. He introduced copies of reports obtained under subpoena from Republic files and, in one instance, the minutes of the recording secretary of the labor organization on which Republic had a report.

"I note," he said to James L. Williams, chief of Republic police, "that your report is more complete than the minutes of the meeting."

La Follette brought out that Williams exchanged labor information with other corporations.

VANDALS BLUR CLIFF WRITING

Indian Hieroglyphics Ruined by Bullets; Writing Origin Still Undetermined.

(By United Press)

CUSTER, S. D.—Hieroglyphics on the walls of Red and Craven canyons in the Black Hills have been destroyed by vandals in many places.

Edges of the markings on the cliff walls have been chipped and bullets fired into them, making it impossible for archeologists to determine the origin of the writings, acording to Mary Heumphreus, manager of 12 Mile Ranch, at the canyon entrance.

"Many of the pictographs are intact, however, particularly the ones in the more inaccessible parts of the canyon," she said.

Theories as to origin of the markings vary. Indian students insist they were made by Sioux Indians, comparatively recently. Others believe they were made by Pueblo Indians who came from the Southwest into the Black Hills. Another group argues they were made by the Aztecs of Mexico.

Even more common than these beliefs, however, is the theory that Coronado, who is generally believed to have come no further north than Nebraska or Kansas, came to the Hills and left a map traced on the walls of Red Canyon. Coronado searched for the "City of Gold" and may have left tracings on the walls so he or his followers might again find the route, proponents of this theory argue.

The pictographs are of various sizes, kinds and colors. Some resemble figures found on Indian wigwams. Some are in the shape of a cross with the circle in the center. Some are colored in red and black. Lines varying in groups of five, ten or more appear at frequent intervals.

War Alarm Evident.

In spite of new cause of friction genuine alarm over the possibility of war with Soviet Russia was evident throughout Japan today and, it became apparent, in Japanese government circles as well.

While Japan is continuing her diplomatic "bluff" in Moscow, the government-inspired press today unanimously took a milder view of the red army's fortification of the Changkufeng area.

The press restricted itself to reporting further activities of the Soviet troops within what was said to be Manchukuoan territory.

But sources close to the government said the officials were decidedly opposed to war if there is any honorable way of avoiding it.

JULY FOURTH BALANCE GROWS

Parks Association Reports $659 Left After Paying All Celebration Bills.

The annual community July Fourth fireworks display sponsored by the Mansfield Public Parks association, for the second successive year proved to be a self-sustaining venture, according to the report of Treasurer Floyd C. Fighter today.

The report showed a balance of $634, the organization clearing exactly $2 more than was made last year after all bills had been accounted for. The surplus this year was $318 as compared with $316 in 1937, the first year that the community display idea was promoted.

Fighter's report this year listed receipts at $2,513 with expenditures totaling $1,878.

Receipts from concessions were listed at $197, seat sales $526, advertising $50 and raised through popular subscription $1,422.

Of the disbursements, $1,128 or nearly 65 per cent of the total, was spent for fireworks, the report showed. The remainder was distributed among approximately 37 other Mansfield firms for materials and supplies and musicians fees to conduct the mammoth afternoon and evening show.

HE'S LAST MAN IN GHOST TOWN

Man, 86, Last Survivor of Town Where 'Black Gold' Cry Drew 18,000.

(By United Press)

PITHOLE, Pa.—The days 'way back in the 1850s, when the magic cry, "black gold," echoed throughout Northwestern Pennsylvania, were recalled when Charles Birtceil, 86, last surviving resident of this once-thriving town of 18,000 persons, was bitten by his Spitz dog.

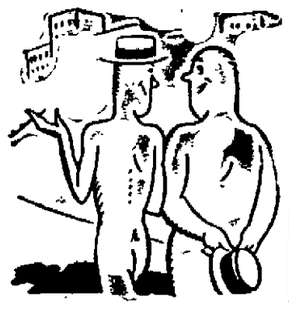
Bitten 20 times on both hands, Birtceil was taken to a doctor in Pleasantville, not far from Titusville, where Col. William Drake discovered oil in 1857..

Like the old "ghost" towns of the West—towns which rose up from the desert during the gold rush days of '49 only to be deserted when the yellow dust was exhausted. Pithole once was the headquarters for fortune hunters at the height of the oil boom.

The town was the scene of feverish activity for several years. Fortunes were made and lost. Then the flow of the wealth-producing fluid diminished and finally dwindled to a point where it was no longer profitable.

With nothing to lure people into the town, the population gradually decreased through the years until Birtceil and his dog were the only ones left.

The aged man is one of the few persons alive today who can recall any detail of Pithole. He can point out in the meadows the location of once thriving streets and the sites of famous buildings that were frequented by hundreds when "black gold" flowed from hastily-erected wells. Outside of Birtceil's humble abode, not one structure of the forgotten town now remains.



Mansfield's alive with men who would like to break out with nothing on.

Of course that can't be done . but we can come the next thing to it. We can show you shirts and pants that weigh less than a dozen tennis balls.

In Politics You Fight With Any Weapons You Can Lay Your Hands On

—By JANE WILLIAMS

A STORY published in yesterday's News-Journal was of such shocking import that many Mansfielders, bewildered and uncomprehending, were asking today: "What's it all about? How could the school bond issue possibly be linked in any way with political controversies and personal political feuds"?

It is one of those things that doesn't make sense—unless you are familiar with certain phases of politics that seldom come to light. You could better understand it if you lived in Germany or Italy or Russia.

The Mansfield situation, when simmered down, amounts to this: An intelligent, energetic young school teacher, actively interested in county and state politics, is told by an opposition organization that he'll either stop thinking for himself and come over to their way of thinking—or their machine will work to defeat Mansfield's million dollar school building project. Where's the connection? It's this: The teacher is interested in good schools for Mansfield and rather than jeopardize the building project, he will withdraw from the political arena in accordance with the demands of the opposition.

As one of the opposition organization says: "Of course it's dirty tactics—but in a political fight you use any weapon you can get."

* * *

FOR the political onlooker the fun and excitement grows apace as the date of the primaries nears. There are so many issues and so many factional fights that the whole political arena takes on the aspect of a Fourth of July celebration — candles and rockets shooting up in so many places at one time that you can't possibly see them all.

While Ohio's biggest fireworks display is between Democratic gubernatorial aspirants, there are a lot of smaller "bombs bursting in mid air." The battle between Judge Day and Robert Taft, Republican primary candidates for United States senator, is perking up. They're both so dignified in bearing that it's a lot of fun to see them slugging at each other.

And Mansfield has a couple of local battles that need take no back place when it comes to fireworks display. There are the Sawyer-Davey groups in a free-for-all slugging match (I'm getting my metaphors of fire works and boxing matches slightly mixed, but what the heck?) and the McFarland-Gardner battle for state central committeeman which is reverberating around the 17th district.

But aside from the fun and excitement for the non-political onlooker, there are serious issues involved this year and many of them will be met at the primary elections. Which means that every person who is sincerely interested in his country, his state and his community must shake off the usual indifference to the primary and get out and vote.

NO one would mind Joan Crawfords "ideal marriages" and "friendly divorces" if she just wouldn't give out so many interviews about the fine points of "how to make your marriage a success."

That sort of interview always sounds so much more authentic from a woman who is celebrating her Golden Wedding anniversary.

* * *

I'M glad that I was born in this particular era. There are so many unbelievable and breathless things happening — things that would have made even Jules Verne look skeptical.

When I was a very small girl, I frequently went with my parents to a little town ten miles from where we lived, and we went in a "surrey" drawn by horses. The round trip took us all day. It seemed only a few years later that I could go, on the very fastest train, from Ohio to California in five days. But the other day men flew around the world in considerably less than that. And only this week a determined young Irishman started for California, made a slight mistake and landed in Ireland instead, after little more than a day. (If Corrigan is called scatter-brained, he can take comfort in the thought that 450 years ago an adventurer before him tried to find the east by sailing west—and discovered America.)

And just as thrilling as Hughes' hop, skip and jump around the world was the heart operation at the Mayo clinic this month in which a human heart that had developed a casing of stone around it, was exposed to the air for two hours, and a part of the time was out of the chest cavity and in the surgeon's hands as he carved at it. And then it was put back in and the man recovered.

And there are men skeptical enough to doubt the simple miracles of the Bible! It wouldn't surprise me a bit if sometime a man swallowed a whale.

BETTE DAVIS," writes a moom pitcher columnist "strikes a new note in luxury—fire places in the bathrooms of her new home. Even Cecil DeMille never thought of that one."

Fooey. Mansfielders of the middle 1800's built them into those old Park Avenue mansions. The old Suzie Sturges home had a half dozen bathrooms, with a fireplace in every one.

Hitler's 4-Power Parley Proposal Flops

BRITAIN, FRANCE TURN DEAF EARS ON CZECH PLAN

Nazi Leader Sought Meeting To Negotiate On Sudeten Problem, London Hears.

(By International News Service)

LONDON — Czechoslovakian trial balloon sent aloft by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler was deflated with a bang today with diplomatic denials that he had proposed a four-power conference to deal with the Sudeten problem.

There was no question in the minds of authoritative observers that such a proposal had been made, but lukewarm responses in Britain and outspoken opposition by France led all concerned to drop the idea with all possible speed.

Sought Army Slash.

Hitler had proposed that France, Britain and Italy join with Germany in guaranteeing the sovereignty of Czechoslovakia. He insisted upon drastic reduction of Prague's army but made no mention whatever of proportionate German reduction, and under such circumstances the plan was held unfeasible.

Carrying out its part of the procedure, the British foreign office issued a statement denying any concrete proposals had been made by either side in the course of yesterday's conversation between Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and German Ambassador Herbert von Dirksen.

"The German ambassador," the statement said, "gave renewed assurance of Germany's peaceful intentions and of the desire of his government to see an amicable and satisfactory solution of the Sudeten Deutsch question.

"The prime minister gave the ambassador certain assurances regarding the continued exercise of his majesty's good good offices at Prague.

Previously, some hopes had been held out that the German plan might provide at least the starting point for successful international negotiation of the problem.

SAWYER FLAYS DAVEY AS CROWD OF BOOERS HECKLES GOVERNOR

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Charles Sawyer declared today that educators, teachers and parent-teacher association groups—not Gov. Martin L. Davey—deserved credit for the foundation school program, while at Canton Davey predicted he would be renominated by "2 to 1 if not 3 to 1."

"He (Davey) has claimed credit . . . but he had no more to do with the school program than any one of your six-year-old children," declared Sawyer in a broadcast address last night in which he assailed his opponent for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. "As a matter of fact, he considered for some days the question of vetoing it."

Davey, making himself heard above a booing audience, said that "if it hadn't been for the troops sent in here last summer, some of you would be in coffins now, the victims of your own guns." He referred to his ordering national guardsmen into the Mahoning valley during the 1937 steel strike.

In making his "2 to 1 if not 3 to 1" prediction, the governor said he would carry "85 out of the 88 counties in Ohio, and I can't name the three we won't."

Sawyer declared himself in favor of appointment of the state conservation commission by the conservation council instead of by the director of agriculture. The real problem behind conservation, he added, was to prevent the interruption of a long-range program by changes in administration.

The Republican U. S. senatorial campaign was further enlivened by a statement from Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati that he had "no part in the controversy between Judge (Arthur) Day and the American Bar association," but that "the judge admits he is violating the canon of judicial ethics." Taft and Day, who is a member of the Ohio supreme court, are opponents for the nomination.

Day declared yesterday that he would ignore a bar association committee request that he appear today and "justify" his candidacy.

Up and Down THE STREET

While Douglas Corrigan and Howard Hughes were garnering a lot of glory for their courageous and intrepid flights, there was a Mansfield "flight" that didn't rate a line of type. But it was almost as dangerous. Cy Robinson, veteran janitor of The News-Journal building for many years, made the "flight" down North Walnut street. Cy mounted a coaster-brake bicycle without knowing that there was any difference between the operations of an ordinary bike and one with a coaster-brake. By the time he reached Fifth and Walnut he was going about 40 miles an hour. A car at the intersection applied the brakes and skidded to a stop as Robinson sailed across the street, jumped the gully, went through the air about eight feet, still on the bicycle, before a building in the gully at the end of the street stopped him.

If you've noticed those advertisements of Denny Correll's orchestra playing at the Rye Beach ballroom this season, you've probably wondered if it is a well known orchestra. It is—but only in Mansfield and vicinity. Because it is made up of a bunch of ambitious youngsters from here, headed by Max Hackedorn who has taken the name of Denny Correll. The boys are stepping out on their own, renting the big ballroom on Lake Erie which hasn't been open for several seasons, and hoping to make good. Members of "Correll's orchestra" are Pete Hackedorn, Tubby Locke, Jim McConnell, Bob Ernst and Jack Hartman.

With the time for the annual Friendly House camping period approaching, Russell Gimbel, headworker at the settlement, sent out an appeal today for "fathers" for some of the underprivileged children of the settlement so they can attend camp. The Friendly House will be able to send some, but not all that want to go, Gimbel said. Those willing to sponsor children at the camp for a week are asked to contact him at the settlement.

It sounds like a sequence in a slap stick comedy, but it happened out on Possum Run golf links last week. It was ladies day and a lone man was on the course. At the fourth hole a swarm of yellow jackets hit him like the locust clouds in "Good Earth." They swarmed over him and up his pant legs and inside his shirt. What did he do? Ladies day or not, he peeled off his clothes right down to a Sally Rand costume. But in spite of his stripping in nothing flat, he was painfully stung several times.

It's the open season for four-leaf clovers so it isn't surprising that reports of big "finds" are being heard. The other day a woman near Butler told of picking 74 in one sitting. Now comes a resident of R. D. 5, Mansfield, who signs herself as Mrs. H. D. P. and reports finding 150 four-leafers in a patch two-foot square, but who says despite all the clovers, her luck has been anything but good.

DIRECTOR RAPS OUSTED AID ON POWER COSTS

'Morgan Failed To Understand Theory I Proposed,' He Tells Congress Probers.

(By Associated Press)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A congressional committee investigating activities of the Tennessee Valley authority sought additional information today from Director David E. Lilienthal on the theory of rate making by which the TVA power "yardstick" was developed.

Lilienthal testified yesterday that the rate-making policy had the approval of President Roosevelt and the federal power commission. He told the committee "TVA rates are sound" and are in fact "too high."

The director's statements marked the opening phase of his defense against charges of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed chairman of the federal agency who testified earlier in the week.

Accused of 'Defamation.'

Lilienthal accused Dr. Morgan of a "campaign of defamation" against him and the present chairman, Harcourt A. Morgan.

The witness denied Dr. Morgan's assertion that the basis for TVA rates had never been revealed and that he (Lilienthal) once referred to them as "little more than a guess." He declared also there was no foundation for the statement that "TVA is selling power without knowing what that power costs."

The misunderstanding over rates, Lilienthal said, was caused largely by "Arthur Morgan's failure to understand the theory I proposed."

The director asserted that in a memorandum to the TVA board in 1936 he recommended in fixing wholesale rates "the liquidation of the actual total investment devoted to power purposes, fixed charges on that investment . . . and all operating expenses, be accepted as the minimum below which those rates should not be permitted to go.

"The actual rates, I clearly recomended, should be determined with reference to other factors: the competitive sources of supply, for example, the social desirability of the wide use of electricity, and the importance of substantial repayment to the federal treasury. In establishing the actual rates those factors and others would be considered in addition to the mentioned fixed and direct costs, but those costs would determine the level below which rates should not fall."

This was known as the "by-product theory," he said, since TVA power is regarded as a by-product of the flood control and navigation dams.

The TVA's delay in reporting to congress on cost allocation of dam and reservoir projects was not, he said, as Dr. Morgan charged, "a deliberate effort to keep congress and the public from knowing what these costs are, and the way in which TVA rates were established."

FAIR ENOUGH!

Press Could Well Turn Spotlight of Publicity On Its Own Activities

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—It pains me to say so, but it occurs to me that the press of our country, alert and diligent as it always has been to investigate other elements of the community, almost never investigates itself. We investigate and expose and often reform evils in politics and business, we unmask foul plotters against the peace and purse of the people, and we supplement the police, sometimes to their honest annoyance or embarrassment, in the pursuit of murderers. We have goaded bashful prosecutors and governors to their duty, broken up gangs, reduced utility rates and have denounced cunning and complicated frauds on the taxpayers before or after the fact.

* * *

But all this time there has existed among the publishers with exceptions too trivial to mention, a sort of unspoken understanding or gentlemen's agreement to refrain from investigating rival newspapers or publishing matters of news interest too well known, to require investigation. I do not refer to incidents in the private lives of the proprietors.

I think that, as a small example, when a paper supports a certain political ticket with the understanding that it will receive the time honored graft of the public notices, the opposition paper should holler "copper!" on its rival. Or if a paper hires a professional murderer to organize a gang of killers to fight a circulation war and its rival does likewise the papers of the other towns should send reporters in and give the story a wild ride.

* * *

The hypothetical cases which would be cited on the basis of known performance are many and of great variety. Publishers may hate one another, personally and politically, and still respect a silent, instinctive understanding to lay off.

If publishers did not treat one another so courteously, the press would be better off today, because the papers would have kept one another in line by the threat of the same kind of publicity that politicians fear. I hope I do not give the impression that publishers are rascals by trade, but in a press as large as ours in this country with ownership or control open to any person or interest with sufficient money, regardless of character or motives chicanery is inevitable. And the square publishers having nothing to fear or gain by silence should treat misconduct, hypocrisy and false motives in the press the same as they treat such doings in other lines.

* * *

I think the papers ought to take picks on one another in their editorial columns, as editors did in a day before my time, and launder their linen as they go along instead of permitting a whole hamper of stuff to accumulate to be put through the wringer and perhaps torn into shreds by some congressional committee. Such suppression gives rise to the suspicion that the press believes it publicity for the embarrassment of everybody and every institution but itself.

PICKS COUNTIES

Wallace Names Those in New Tenant Purchase Program.

COLUMBUS — (UP) — Seven Ohio counties have been selected to participate in the Bankhead-Jones tenant purchase program for the fiscal year just beginning, according to word received from Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Counties selected are Auglaize, Belmont, Butler, Morrow, Paulding, Seneca, and Trumbull. Selection was based upon farm population, tenant prevalency, farming conditions and geographical distribution.

Counties selected last year to participate are Henry, Holmes, Greene, Darke, and Washington. Ohio's allotment loan fund of $560,817 will be divided among the counties so as to provide money for between five and ten loans in each county.

ACCEPTS SHELBY STREET PROJECT

County Includes Improvement in $1,000,000 WPA Program.

On the application of the Shelby city council, Richland county commissioners today included a proposed Shelby street improvement project in the $1,000,000 county wide WPA program.

The city of Shelby will be required to contribute about 20 per cent of the cost of any improvements that are authorized, with federal funds providing the remainder, commissioners said.

Trustees in a number of the county's townships already have been authorized to include their road projects in the blanket WPA program which got under way more than a week ago.

DIXON BECOMES RELIEF CHIEF

Clevelander Named By Davey To $400 Monthly Post As Needy Aid Director.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — William Dixon, 34-year-old former assistant law director of Cleveland, assumed command of Ohio's new relief program today with a pledge that "those properly entitled to relief will get it."

Dixon was appointed director of the program by Gov. Martin L. Davey late yesterday and announced he would assume his duties at once. The apointment is for the period ending April 21, 1939, and the salary is $400 monthly.

Working with Dixon in the administration of the program is State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson who, under the acts approved by the recent special session of the legislature, will make pre-audits of local government relief costs and examine the eligibility of poor aid clients.

Dixon will supervise the entire program and investigate its administration by local governments. He has the power to cause the auditor to withhold state grants from any subdivisions that disregard his orders. The legislature created a board of appeals, composed of the auditor, state treasurer and superintendent of budget to hear appeals from the director's ruling.

The new director, not widely known in Ohio, served as assistant law director in Cleveland in 1932 and 1933, devoting himself to civil service matters.

Trailer Clinics Used In Campaign On Tuberculosis

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The WPA is dotting the country with a new kind of trailer—for tuberculosis patients.

The "tuberculosis trailers" are used as private hospitals in isolated areas and, in cities, as supplements to crowded hospital facilities.

Constructed by WPA and National Youth Administration workers, the trailers admit a maximum of sunlight and provide isolation to prevent spread of the disease.

"Most of the trailer projects are sponsored by counties or health associations," the WPA reports, "and the distribution of cottages and care of patients is done under their supervision."

Arkansas uses 100 of the trailers in five counties, with the largest unit at Searcy, in White county. Arizona has units in four counties, with large clusters at Tucson and Phoenix.

GLASS CARGO SURVIVES

CONNEAUT —(U.P.)— Not one glass container was cracked or broken when a tractor-trailer outfit, en route from Olean, N. Y., to Cleveland, and carrying 12,980 glass fruit jars, failed to make a turn, rammed a tree and overturned.

Rheims Restoration Completed

The famous edfice was rebuilt from shattered ruins left by German shell-fire during the World war with funds, a large share of which came from America, principally through endowments by Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller.

In the presence of civil and ecclesiastical authorities of half a dozen nations, the rebuilt Rheims Cathedral, "batismal font of the French nation" and one of the most beautiful buildings in the world, was consecrated in a three-day ceremony.

CHURCH FREER BUT MEXICO'S CURBS REMAIN

Restrictions Provided by Law Are Not Enforced Now, Observers Find.

(By United Press)

MEXICO, D. F.—The position of the Catholic church in Mexico has improved greatly in the past three years, and ecclesiastical authorities are hopeful that further improvements will be effected.

Now attention of Mexican Catholics is focused on the State of Tabasco, where during the dictatorship of Tomas Garrido Canabal churches were razed, laws passed requiring priests to marry if they wanted to officiate, and other anti-Catholic measures were taken. While in the last 36 months hundreds of churches have been reopened in many other states, the Tabasco situation remains the same.

Tired of worshiping clandestinely, thousands of Tabascans went to Villahermosa, the state capital, to demand legal resumption of worship. They gathered within the ruins of a church on May 11, and stayed there until May 30, when the police fired on them, killing four peasants, one woman and a girl.

Cardenas Takes Action.

Catholics from all over the country protested to President Lazaro Cardenas. He took steps to remedy the situation. On June 2, the minister of the interior, Ignacio Garcia Tellez, stated that "the Federal government maintains respect for all religious creeds, and does not impede the celebration of worship inside temples. All authorities have express instructions to abstain from any persecution of the legitimate rights."

Secret negotiations then began between representatives of the church and government to seek a formula for the resumption of worship in Tabasco.

In most states, and especially in the Federal District, the church has nearly complete freedom in worship and ceremonials. When the Archbishop of Mexico, Pascual Diaz, died on May 19, 1936, his body lay in state in the cathedral, where imposing funeral services were held. It was estimated that 200,000 people—most of them in black—lined the route from the cathedral to the graveyard on the hill back of Basilica of Guadalupe.

When the new Archbishop of Mexica, Dr. Luis M. Martinez, was invested this spring with the sacred "pallium" sent by Pope Pius XI as a symbol of authority and rank, a solemn two-hour ritualistic ceremony was performed at Guadalupe. The historic Basilica itself recently was rebuilt inside at considerable expense. Catholics from all over Mexico donated money for the repairs — even though the building is really the property of the Federal government.

INFANT BURIED TODAY

Funeral services for Carol Ann Downs, one-day-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Downs, 110 Blanche street, who died Friday in General hospital, were to be held at 4 p. m. today at the Wappner funeral home with Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger of the First Christian church officiating. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery. A brother, Elyon; a sister, Elinor, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Downs, survive.

SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—traffic accidents don't happen—they are caused.

A California woman has been sentenced to keep a secret for ten years—in spite of sentiment against cruel and unusual punishment.

No Place for Political Meddling.

ANY ATTEMPT, even in a veiled way, to inject partisan politics, or intra-party differences, into Mansfield's school bond issue proposal, cannot be excused—even in the heat and bitterness of a campaign.

The proposal to issue $550,000 in bonds to meet requirements for a federal grant of $450,000 to carry through a million dollar public school improvement program in Mansfield is too important a project, and too essential to the future of this city, to permit it to be made a plaything of politicians or trading stock for support of any candidate or candidates.

Charges have been made—and emphatically denied. The public is not especially concerned about the inside workings of party politics—as long as these workings are confined to matters that are legitimately within partisan bounds.

But let it be generally understood that there is to be no political meddling with such a community project as is involved in the present effort to modernize Mansfield's public schools, so that they may compare favorably with schools in other cities of Mansfield's size.

The safety, health and educational opportunities of Mansfield's children are vastly more important than the nomination or defeat of any candidate for public office.

Weakness In Drivers' License Law.

SELDOM is the weakness of Ohio's automobile drivers' license law more convincingly shown than in the case of a Toledo police report in which it was stated that a motorist with one leg off and the other badly crippled, was arrested on the charge of drunken driving.

It appears that this offender's license had been revoked on a previous conviction for driving while intoxicated, but that he had continued to drive his car, without license, until again arrested.

Commenting on this occurrence, the Toledo Blade says: "It is not resonable to expect police to know whether every person behind a steering wheel has a license. The public would not stand for continually being stopped to be asked about it, but it would be at least a start in the direction of common sense if the law required the driver's license to be displayed on the windshield or window of the car."

Another California 'Plan.'

PROPOSAL to give $30 a week pension to all persons more than 50 years of age is being launched in Ohio this week as a part of the nation-wide movement started a few months ago in California.

It has been announced that initiative petitions for the purpose of amending Ohio pension laws are to be put in circulation soon. Such petitions circulated in California have already been sufficiently signed to assure the proposal a place on the ballot.

The plan calls for issuance of scrip warrants to pensioners each Thursday, for use in making purchases or in payment of bills. It is required that a special 2-cent stamp be affixed to each $1 warrant weekly, so that by the end of a year $1.04 will be returned to the state for each dollar issued.

Proponents of the plan are inclined to disregard its obvious weaknesses and some are inclined to be insistent that it should start at the age of 40 instead of 50.

Considering the Rear-Drive Assembly.

SHOW of interest in a possible radical change in the appearance of automobiles within the next few years seems to have resulted largely from the Ford Motor company's recent application for a patent on a rear-end engine assembly, which attracted understandable attention in Washington and elsewhere.

This idea is not new, nor is the Ford company the first to secure patents involving the rear-drive principle. For a number of years this has been regarded by many automotive authorities as the next logical step in the evolution of motor transport.

Speculation as to what changes in shape and arrangement of the car body may come about with a rear-drive motor also provides interesting material for conversation—with possibility of the front seat being put forward, to increase visibility, running boards being eliminated to allow more body width, etc.

Odd—but imaginable—that today's "last word" in classy cars may provide the museum pieces for twenty years from now.

Counterfeit Half Dollars.

ALL MONEY is not "good." Some of it is counterfeit. Most people are accustomed to accepting money in change without thinking of the possibility that it may be bogus.

There is probably always some counterfeit money in circulation but "bad" half dollars have been floating around in Mansfield to a noticeable extent for the past several weeks.

Most of them are poor imitations of the genuine. Others are readily accepted by the unobservant. All are underweight and off color. Ask your banker to tell you a couple of simple rules to detect counterfeit coins. Then be on guard.

Those Who Rob the Blind.

USUALLY the argument seems all against return of the whipping post as a method of punishment—

Then you are suddenly confronted by the sort of case that makes you wonder—

Such as the Steubenville incident of this week, in which thieves raided the cases of a blind man who has a little stand in the lobby of the federal building.

The blind man has been trying to earn his own living, so as to become independent of a blind pension.

Civilization gives evidence of being very rudimentary—in spots.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

THE NATIONS that have not gone to war already have won, world observers are declaring now.

What is meant?

Well, take the case of Italy: Ethiopia has been a serious drain, and the Fascist-backed Franco still has not conquered Spain after two years of terrible toll.

Germany likewise has been sorely disappointed in Spain.

Surely if Italy and Germany together could not win Spain, what could they do against really powerfully equipped nations? Such is the reasoning.

As for Japan—its China campaign has become a debacle.

Surely, Russia can sit back and laugh—if one can laugh at tragedy which snuffs out hundreds of thousands of lives.

* * *

IN THE MEANTIME—

Now, see what has been going on, in the meantime—

Great Britain has rearmed extensively. It has billions against the other nations' tens of millions, in Europe.

The United States has a naval program that is stupendous, that could not possibly be undertaken by any other nation except Great Britain.

France has had a breathing spell—used to advantage.

And the South American nations seem definitely to have turned their backs on Nazi-ism—and to lean toward a Pan-Americanism.

This is no year of which Mussolini, Hitler and the Japanese militarists can boast. Their security marts tell the tale.

* * *

DANGEROUS

Nevertheless, it is an uneasy world. What will it do with all these tremendous armaments? Into whose hands will they fall?

The present administrators barely will last another decade. Then what type of men will succeed—men who will bring about the holocaust, or men who will strive for reason, understanding, sanity, internationalism rather than mad nationalism?

Even as victory comes today through peace, it will tomorrow and the age after tomorrow. What would Japan give today NOT to have gone into China? But, alas, that gives no succor to the devastated Chinese. Nor will Spain's slain youth come back to life.

Thus, we are told, we arm to frighten would-be aggressor nations into sanity.

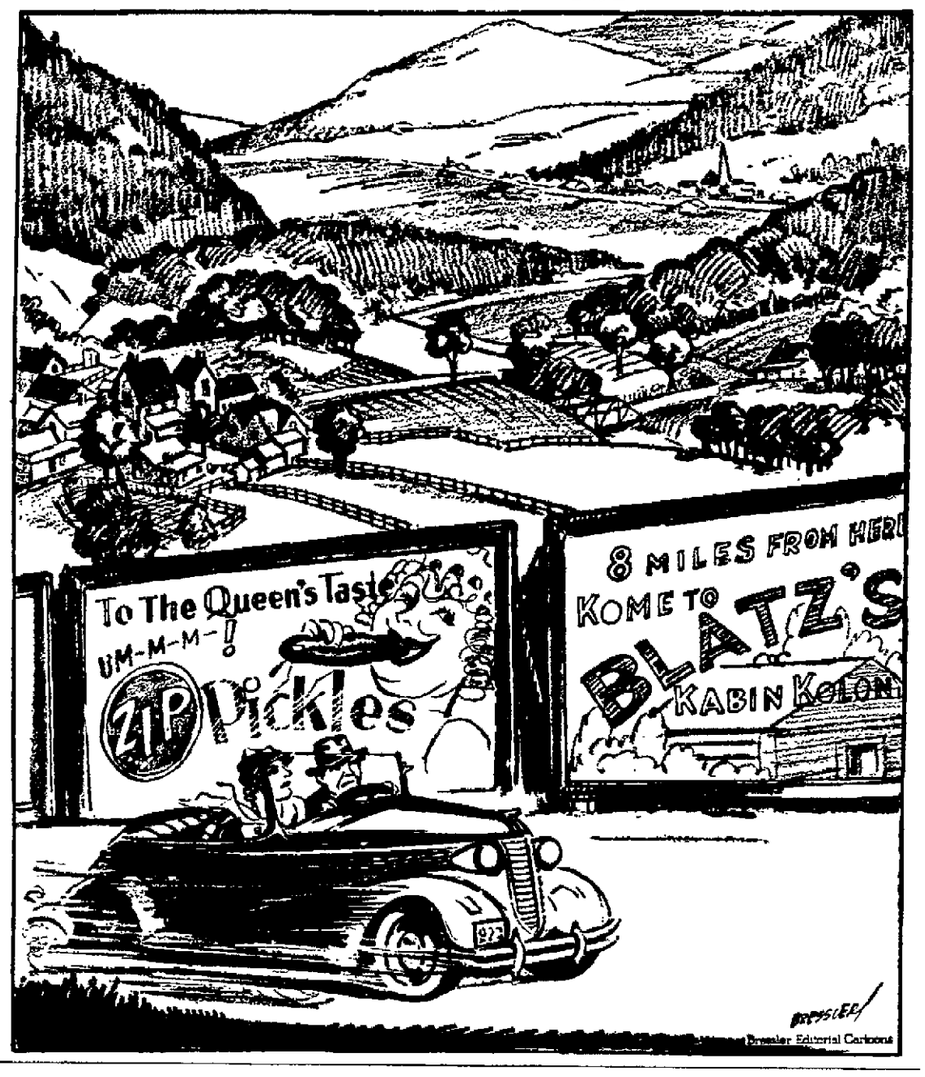
"SEE AMERICA FIRST"



Is F. D. R. Angling For Third Term?

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Political observers in Washington unquestionably are more and more inclined to believe that President Roosevelt is thinking seriously of running for the White House again in 1940.

They do not assert that he seems definitely to have made up his mind in favor of a third campaign, but the great majority of them certainly are of the opinion that his apparent attitude hints at a willingness to be drafted if the demand for his candidacy once more is strong enough.

He assuredly had an excellent opportunity to say "Nothing doing" when a group of his admirers appealed to him, on his recent trip through the west, to give them another chance to vote for him two years hence.

Inasmuch as he said no such thing the analysts' conclusion is that the suggestion was not unwelcome to him. On the contrary, some surmise that this western appeal was stage managed, as a feeler, and that there will be further appeals of a similar sort, if signs indicate that the initial one "took" at all satisfactorily.

* * *

POPULAR VIEW?

And, in fact, third term talk has not thus far developed any violent manifestation of popular opposition.

Not but that there are folk who express themselves negatively, and probably their number will be increased if the likelihood of a 1940 Rooseveltian renomination begins to look like a reasonable certainty. Still, there obviously is quite a strong under-current to the effect that "F. D." is putting across a program which cannot be fully realized in a mere eight years and which nobody else is equipped to carry on to complete realization—a realization regarded by many Americans as devoutly to be desired.

* * *

CAUTIOUS

President Roosevelt, it may be taken for granted, will not try to buck a genuinely dangerous tempest.

To run again and be beaten would imply the defeat of the entire New Deal.

He would not risk that, either on his own account or on account of the New Deal.

I do not think he would chance a third run even with the prospect of squeaking through skimpily. It would be better for him to pick his own successor, leaving it to the latter to finish up the New Deal program, or, failing, to "take the rap."

Should he (the successor) fizzle, his would be most of the odium. Should he succeed, "F. D." would get most of the credit, as the New Deal originator.

* * *

AS STEWART SEES IT.

But if the whole thing isto be a howling success, naturally the president would like to have initiated it and then be in on its completion, too.

That would call for another term—two more years are not enough.

By 1940 it should be possible to make a pretty good guess, and "F. D." is an extraordinarily good political guesser.

If the prospect looks good then, from his standpoint, one might guess rather confidently on a third term campaign. If otherwise, no; bet on "Dear Alben" or some other chap for the Democratic nomination.

* * *

IS THIS PROBABLE?

Briefly:

If Roosevelt runs again he will win again.

If he sees he cannot win he will not run.

Nobody knows what the situation will be like in 1940. "F. D." himself doesn't know. And he's the best politician of them all.

Barring accidents and the contingencies of the coming primarics and election and the next two years' chances, I should gamble on "F. D." myself—say 3 to 2.

Listen, World!

We Want to Get Without Giving.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THAT grand, old battler . . . General Hugh S. Johnson . . . has, I suspect, said another Mouthful.

Amongst the 9,476,528 things which have been getting Hughie's Goat, these Chronic Crabbers just about head the list. Professional Peevers who can't see a smidge of hope in nothin' nohow. Gloomy Gerts and embittered Berts who tell everybody what a raw deal they're getting . . . 'n' how happy everybody was in the Dear Old Days. One and all they have been raising our favorite General's gorge until, at last, he has delivered himself of this blast.

"The present fashion of going around this nation telling people how miserable they are, how rotten their country is, what little opportunity they have to better themselves, and therefore what their government ought to do and is going to do for them is . . . a contemptible kind of demagoguery . . . The plain hard truth is that these kids and our whole population now demand many times more of everything than (the older generation) did and are not willing to work as hard or suffer as much for it." . . . . . .

Which, I submit, is a man-sized dose for what ails America in general. Not that I believe Life's a Bowl of Cherries for anybody, nowadays. But living wouldn't be a tenth as tough as we all think it is if we'd stop crying for the moon and cut our desires to a practical pattern.

There's nothing new about Wanting Things. We've always wanted things. But 40 years ago we expected to get only what we earned . . . or had our ears batted down. Today, there is no limit to our expectation. Danny, the Ditch Tender, and Daisy, the Dish Washer, see no reason why they should not possess as Keen Klothes and Slick Speedsters as Clark Gable or Myrna Loy. And if they do not possess them, it's not their fault. Anything But! They've been done dut; they're the Victims of the System!

YOUNG MARRIED COUPLES NO LONGER BEGIN WHERE THE OLD FOLK LEFT OFF . . . BUT WHERE THE OLD FOLK NEVER EVEN HOPED TO ARRIVE.

Just for shucks, I recently made a survey of the girls in a country High School class. The majority of them came from families which were on W. P. A. Few of the fathers averaged more than $18 per week. Yet, in a graduating class of 27, only three of the families represented did not own a car of some kind. Every girl wore silk stockings. Every girl had had at least one permanent and went to at least two movies per week. And, with two exceptions, every girl had enough dresses so that she could wear a different ensemble each day.

All had "formals"—of a sort. The dresses were, for the most part cheap, sleazy affairs. But all were "ready mades." Not a girl in the class—and only four of their mothers — could make a dress unaided. And this variety and number of dresses was regarded as an absolute "must" in High School life. Girls who didn't have permanented hair and who couldn't wear a different dress every day were declasse.

Yes, there are exceptions to this school. Expensive private institutions . . . and wisely governed parochial schools . . . where good taste rather than gaudy greed are the rule. But to the average American in 1938, life means Strutting Your Stuff with all the prevailing Gew Gaws and Gadgets!

In 1898 or 1908, young brides (Eleanor Roosevelt included) expected to wear patches, carry bundles, use household Hand-me-down's. Try to impress such economy upon little Mrs. Jones today and see how far you get!

It isn't the System that's at fault, but our own notion of what is essential to a Regular Life. That notion would bankrupt any nation . . . make a bum of any human. Once we Americans prided ourselves on living within our incomes. Now the deuce with the incomes. We want what we want—regardless!

"CHAMPAGNE APPETITES ON LAGER BEER INCOMES" —THAT'S WHAT OUR FATHERS USED TO CALL IT.

BUT WHERE WILL SUCH APPETITES END? HOW LONG CAN WE GET WITHOUT GIVING . . . PLAY WITHOUT PAYING? YOU TELL.

What's Happened?

A Week-End Summary of Current Events.

DOUGLAS CORRIGAN and "Lone Eagle" Lindbergh, people now say, are "as alike as two peas in a crate."

In a five-cylinder, $900 used-plane, Corrigan made a $69.60 hop that flabbergasted hasty Howard Hughes, et al. Taking off from New York for California, he flew with the greatest of ease in 28 hours and 13 minutes to Dublin, Ireland. He had no backers, no radio, no weather reports, no parachute, no permit, no passport, no sandwiches.

Landing with $15, he was swamped with offers of nicer work and fancier pay than he ever had been able to get before. Technically "held" for violating regulations, he was a guest of honor at the U. S. legation and patted on the back by Eire's Prime Minister de Valera.

"All is forgiven — pleas come home, by boat!" Uncle Sam told him, in effect, and to prevent him from flying back the commerce department suspended the experimental aircraft certificate it had issued on his jaloppy. Next weekend the prodigal pilot is due to come home, and both New York and Los Angeles plan fanfares for him.

Spirit of 1929.

Corrigan, born in Galveston 31 years ago, won a beauty prize in a baby show—and that apparently was his only previous contact with fame's unfading flowers. His parents died and he grew up in the home of Uncle S. Fraser Langford, a Baptist minister. He went to a Los Angeles high school, became a mechanic and learned to fly 13 years ago.

People laughed when he set his aeronautical antique down on a New York field last week after a nonstop trip from California in 27 hours and 50 minutes, because his ship was a 1929 Curtiss Robin, with less power than Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," and so many gas tanks he had trouble seeing where he was going.

He used to call it "Sunshine," but dropped the name because he was caught in a rain nearly every time he flew it. And it was raining when he dropped into Dublin.

Corrigan was the eighth person to fly the Atlantic alone.

Britain's piggy-back affair started Wednesday from Ireland. A big plane, the Maia, carried a little plane, the Mercury, into the air and gave the latter a flying start. Its two occupants then made a 2,000-mile dash across the Atlantic in 13 hours and 29 minutes, landed in Montreal and went on to New York.

The airplane fare from New York to London this fall is expected to be about $450.

Politics

Taking Sides.

President Roosevelt, after endorsing California's Sen. William G. McAdoo last week-end, went fishing. But the political circus continued:

Labor's Non-Partisan league rated congressmen according to their labor views and put two score of them on a "blacklist."

A CIO official announced his organization would support the Democratic ticket in Pennsylvania.

AFL endorsed Sen. Alben W. Barkley in his Kentucky race for renomination and Rep. David John Lewis in the Maryland Democratic senatorial contest.

Connecticut's Democratic Sen. Augustine Lonergan said he was for Roosevelt, and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said that Lonergan was all right.

Chairman Sheppard announced the senate campaign funds committee had an investigator at work in Tennessee, was sending investigators into Kentucky and Pennsylvania and had discontinued inquiries in North Dakota and California.

At Home

Trust Busting.

Beginning two years ago, federal trust busters got 122 indictments against oil companies, executives and trade papers charging conspiracy to peg gasoline prices and/or limit profits of independent jobbers.

Score to date, following an appeal decision at Madison, Wis., this week: 17 defendants convicted and fined a total of $65,000 for price pegging, 37 freed, 18 granted a new trial, nine not yet tried; 24 defendants fined $15,000 each for limiting jobbers' profits after they dropped their defense, 17 awaiting trial in September.

* * *

Bering Strait Braved.

Prehistoric men are believed to have crossed the Bering Strait from Siberia to America in skin canoes. Evidence of both the feasibility and difficulty of such a trip has been supplied this summer by Father Bernard J. Hubbard, 49, California scientist. He and eight companions made a one-week, 230-mile trip northward through the strait in a skin canoe with an outboard motor.

* * *

Woman's Work.

Ellsworth, Kas., has built a $60,000 city hall, paid off $116,000 bonds, improved streets, etc., and still cut the tax levy. A woman, Mrs. Clara Williford, 51, is mayor. And she explains: "A woman can get by with a lot of things a man can't."

* * *

Stiff Gag.

Sandra Martin, ex-secretary of Simone Simon, has been convicted of forgery and sentenced to nine months in jail—and she'll get from three to 42 years, a Los Angeles judge told her this week, if she sells any of Simone's secrets within the next ten years.

* * *

Movie Regimentation?

Movie fans can't choose the kind of pictures they want, because theaters throughout America are "regimented" by a virtual monopoly into showing the kind that will make the most money nationally, according to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

And to restore "free enterprise and open competition amongst all branches of the motion-picture industry," he filed anti-trust law charges Wednesday against eight big film firms.

This action, he added, "may settle questions that are vital in the applications of anti-trust laws to other industries."

QUOTES

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican chairman: "If there is no grass growing in the streets of America, it is because it has been trampled down by 13,000,000 people looking for work."

James A. Farley, Democratic chairman: "You have made Roosevelt commander-in-chief in the war against depression and recession and we ask you not to unhorse him in the midst of a battle and take his sword away."

Labor

LaFollette's Search.

Pushing into the third year of its search for a way to protect civil liberties, a senate committee this week dug into past labor troubles of Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. The object, Chairman LaFollette had said, would be to show up industrialists' strategy of using employer associations and the public "to do to labor" what they can't do individually now because of the Wagner act.

Witnesses from Canton, O., told about violence during a strike in a Republic subsidiary there in 1935. Some blamed Republic and said company guards had attacked pickets, bystanders and even policemen with clubs and tear gas. Republic officials denied many of the stories and laid the violence to failure of local authorities to maintain law and order.

* * *

Quiet Please!

Last week a labor board examiner expelled Clyde Armstrong, Weirton Steel Company lawyer, from the 11-months-old hearing of Wagner-act charges against the company because Armstrong refused to sit down when the examiner told him to. And this week, as NLRB heard Armstrong's appeal for reinstatement, Chairman Madden clashed with Armstrong's lawyer and warned he would stop the appeal hearing "unless you keep quiet when I tell you to do so."

* * *

Maytag Strike.

Maytag washing-machine workers at Newton, Ia., struck last May 9 rather than take a 10% pay cut. A state arbitration board's recent recommendations were accepted in general by CIO but were rejected by the company. Last Monday, 450 men went back to work, but 1,000 remained idle. Tuesday Newton's mayor said he needed help to keep order, and the governor sent national guardsmen. Wednesday the plant closed again after several persons were hurt in street fighting.

* * *

Chicago Demonstration.

A judge had forbidden interference with men who wanted to go back to work in a North Chicago foundry where CIO iron workers walked out after a pay cut six weeks ago. So 50 police gave 300 demonstrators just five minutes to break it up, then scattered the crowd, injuring several persons, with clubs and tear gas this week.

Abroad

Big War Dept.

In Spain this week: Four shells struck the U. S. embassy building at Madrid. Insurgents continued to advance toward Valencia. And scorekeepers reported insurgents now control 35 provinces to the loyalists' 10, which leaves the status of five others uncertain.

In China this week: Japan's army and navy still were battling Chinese along the Yangtze, more than 100 miles below Hankow, as the temperature soared to more than 100 degrees. Japan's airmen raided Hankow and killed 20 Chinese at a U. S. mission school.

* * *

Greece Shaken.

A man awaiting sentence for killing his children was crushed to death when an earthquake knocked down the jail at Oropos, Greece, Wednesday morning. And elsewhere the nation's worst shock in modern times killed at least 20, injured 100, swallowed houses and wrecked one entire village.

* * *

Olympic Maneuvers.

The 1940 Olympics, given up by Japan, were officially awarded this week to Helsingfors, Finland —and an international scramble for the 1944 games began.

Proper Flag Display.

Probably not more than one out of 10 loyal Americans, despite the fact of their love for the flag of their country, know the technicalities of how properly to display the colors publicly.

It could be argued perhaps that it is a small matter, which, because so few of us know exactly how the national emblem should be hung, doesn't amount to much. But this is rather an indifferent way of looking at it. We cherish and respect "Old Glory," rich in symbolism and revered because of its traditions. Because there is a definite and proper way of displaying the banner on any given occasion and in any specific setting, outdoors or indoors, it seems to us that those who display it ought to know the rules and follow the customs laid down by authority or established by long usage.

This is merely elementary patriotism which anyone interested can learn in a few minutes.—Columbus Dispatch.
